FROM : M. A. Jones

SUBJECT: ELLIOT L. RICHARDSON
MASSACHUSETTS ATTORNEY GENERAL
POSSIBLE APPOINTMENT AS UNDER SECRETARY OF STATE

ELLIOT L. RICHARDSON
Captioned individual has reportedly been asked by the Nixon Administration to be Under Secretary of State.

Richardson was born on 7-7-20 in Boston and graduated cum laude from both Harvard College and Harvard Law School in 1941 and 1947, respectively. From 1957 to 1959 he was an Assistant Secretary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, a position he resigned to become United States Attorney in Boston. Secretary of State designate, William P. Rogers, was Attorney General while Richardson was United States Attorney from 1959 to 1961.

Richardson is reportedly a [redacted]
[redacted] He was law clerk to both the late Judge Learned Hand and the late Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter. As United States Attorney Richardson reportedly gained a reputation for fighting corruption and for prosecuting the late Bernard Goldfine, a key figure in the case involving Sherman Adams of the White House staff during the Eisenhower Administration.

The Bureau has conducted applicant-type investigations on Richardson in 1953, 1956 and 1959, all of which were very favorable except for disclosing a number of traffic arrests in Massachusetts.

The Director saw and was photographed with Richardson on 1-6-60 while Richardson was in Washington attending a United States Attorneys' Conference. The Director autographed the photograph and sent it to Richardson by letter of 1-7-60. The Director had previously written to Richardson on 9-29-59 congratulating him on being appointed United States Attorney. Relations between our Boston Office and Richardson have been good. The liaison agent, SA [redacted] was instructed to interview [redacted] denied that he had any derogatory information on Richardson and asked SA [redacted] to determine the background of any such report and to let him know.

The fact that [redacted] had derogatory information on Richardson came from [redacted] President-Elect Nixon. I called [redacted] back 1/9/69 and told him that [redacted] apparently had no derogatory information. I asked [redacted] for further facts inasmuch as it would be necessary to have such information if we were to conduct a complete investigation regarding Richardson. [redacted] agreed but stated that perhaps his facts had been garbled.

[redacted] told me that his initial information [redacted] President-Elect Nixon. He stated that [redacted] had gotten this information and had called [redacted] then apparently became excited and called [redacted] asked me to call [redacted] to see if [redacted] could furnish the information.

I called [redacted] at 4:10 p. m. this afternoon and he stated that he had no derogatory information concerning Richardson but that apparently there had been some protest over the appointment and the protest had obviously been mentioned to [redacted]

(RICHARDSON)

WASHINGTON--ELLIOT L. RICHARDSON, UNDERSECRETARY OF STATE-DESIGNATE, SPENT MOST OF HIS SENATE CONFIRMATION HEARING TODAY RECITING A PERSONAL HISTORY OF TRAFFIC ARRESTS WHICH HE SAID HAD BEEN TWISTED TO INFER THAT "RICHARDSON IS A LUSH."

"I CANNOT BELIEVE THAT EVEN MY ENEMIES WOULD MAKE SUCH AN ASSERTION," RICHARDSON TOLD THE SENATE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE.

FOREIGN RELATIONS CHAIRMAN J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT, WHO HAPPEL NEWSMEN WHILE THE COMMITTEE QUESTIONED SECRETARY OF STATE-DESIGNATE WILLIAM P. ROGERS, OPENED THE DOORS WHEN RICHARDSON TOOK THE STAND. HE SAID THE MASSACHUSETTS ATTORNEY GENERAL ASKED FOR AN OPEN HEARING SO HE COULD CLEAR UP "WHISPERING CAMPAIGNS" AND OTHER INNUENDOS ABOUT HIS DRIVING RECORD.

FULBRIGHT TOLD NEWSMEN HE WAS SATISFIED WITH RICHARDSON'S EXPLANATION OF HIS JOB QUALIFICATIONS. THERE WAS NO INDICATION THAT ANY COMMITTEE MEMBER OPPOSED RICHARDSON'S NOMINATION.

SEN. JACOB K. JAVITS, R-N.Y., PRAISED RICHARDSON FOR BEING WILLING TO GO INTO THE "NITTY GRITTY" OF HIS TRAFFIC OFFENSES.

"YOU'LL HAVE A DRIVER IN THIS ADMINISTRATION," SEN. JOHN SHERMAN COOPER, R-N.Y., TOLD RICHARDSON HEYLY. "I HOPE SO," RICHARDSON REPLIED.

RICHARDSON SAID A SYNDICATED COLUMN (DREW PEARSON) THIS WEEK LISTED HIS DRIVING OFFENSES AND "COUPLED THIS WITH...AT LEAST AN INFERENCE THAT I AM AN ALCOHOLIC." HE SAID THE INFERENCE WAS "ABSOLUTELY WITHOUT FOUNDATION."

HE RECITED 12 TRAFFIC ARRESTS RANGING FROM A DRUNK DRIVING CONVICTION WHEN A COLLEGE SOPHOMORE TO TRIP OFFENSES WHILE AN OFFICIAL OF THE NEW DEPARTMENT DURING THE KENNEDY ADMINISTRATION.

"I'M BY NO MEANS PROUD OF THEM BUT I HAVE NEVER CONCEALED THEM," RICHARDSON SAID. HE SAID THE RECITATION WAS FAMILIAR SINCE HIS TRAFFIC RECORD HAD BEEN DISCUSSED DURING HIS MASSACHUSETTS CAMPAIGNS FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR AND ATTORNEY GENERAL.

[redacted] could not recall who had told him this nor could he name anyone who had attended this party. He could give no further specifics regarding this and stated that he did not want this to be reported as it would be considered "sour grapes" coming from him, a [redacted] appointee. No other individual interviewed in attached report ever made reference to such an incident, and all persons interviewed were specifically asked of their opinion of the appointee's character. The Standard-Times, a daily newspaper published at New Bedford, Massachusetts, dated February 4, 1968, contains an article attributed to Attorney General ELLIOT L. RICHARDSON on February 3, 1968, in a speech made before the Massachusetts Bar Association at Fall River, Massachusetts, which reads as follows:

"Law enforcement corruption exists in every major city in Massachusetts. Without this corruption organized crime wouldn't stay in operation another month. He said that gambling operations which provide funds to the underworld are carried on generally under the noses of local police."

The Standard-Times of February 6, 1968, contained an article on page six entitled, "RICHARDSON HIT FOR 'POLICE CORRUPTION' REMARK." This article in part reads as follows:

"An angry District Attorney, EDMUND DINIS of new Bedford, countered by mailing to dozens of newspapers, copies of what he says is RICHARDSON's own 'record' of run-ins with the police - a list of 14 traffic violations in Boston and Washington, dating from 1939 and ranging from a $2 fine for a mechanical device deficiency on his car to a $200 Operating to Endanger fine.

"DINIS said, 'RICHARDSON's wholesale indictment of Massachusetts police is unwarranted and ill-advised...(this)... malicious attack on the police in Massachusetts is motivated by the fact that he, RICHARDSON, has had numerous personal clashes with police and law enforcement.

"'The Attorney General is endeavoring to use the majesty and power of his office as a launching pad for his declared aspirations to become Governor of Massachusetts in 1970.' DINIS continued, 'This is a grave situation where a partison political aspirant is endeavoring to prostitute the administration of justice for his own private preserve.'"

The Standard-Times of February 8, 1968, contained an editorial on page 6 which in part reads as follows:

"Another protest came from District Attorney EDMUND DINIS. While not denying the RICHARDSON charge, the Chief Prosecutor of the Southern District issued some charges of his own, principally that RICHARDSON made a 'malicious attack on the police' because the Attorney General 'has had numerous personal clashes with police and law enforcement.' These 'clashes' were motor vehicle violations between 10 and 30 years ago.

"It must be presumed that since RICHARDSON has called for a special Grand Jury Investigation of crime in Bristol County, DINIS is angry at the Attorney General for trying to expose, as Mr. RICHARDSON expressed it, 'alleged widespread, pervasive, notorious and systematic criminal offenses' in Mr. DINIS' district while the latter is busy challenging redistricting laws in court and running for Congress."

On 1/9/69 the Department of State requested investigation of Richardson who has been designated as Under Secretary of State by President Nixon. We conducted previous applicant-type investigations of Mr. Richardson in 1953, 1956, and 1959. He is formerly Assistant Secretary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and U. S. Attorney, Boston, Massachusetts. Since January, 1967, he has been Attorney General of Massachusetts.

Previous investigations indicated Richardson had several traffic arrests including one in May, 1939, for "operating under the influence" for which he was fined $50. During current investigation an anonymous call was received at Nixon headquarters indicating Richardson had many arrests for drunken driving. This was not substantiated by investigation. Only one person commented unfavorably concerning his sobriety stating he had heard from an unrecalled source that Richardson had "fallen flat on his face" at a party. Extensive investigation was conducted and no other indications of excessive drinking were developed. Investigation otherwise favorable.

During his confirmation hearing on 1/15/69 Richardson admitted the 1939 drunken driving arrest as well as his other traffic arrests.

ACTION: Attached for approval are letters to Mr. [redacted] and the Secretary of State transmitting a summary memorandum containing the results of both the 1959 investigation and our current inquiries concerning Mr. Richardson. Summaries containing the 1953 and 1956 investigations have previously been furnished to Mr. [redacted] and the State Department.

I attended the reception and I would estimate that there were roughly 35 to 90 United States Attorneys present, many of whom had their wives. It was a very well run affair and the Attorney General as well as other Departmental heads were also present. The Deputy Attorney General introduced Senator James O. Eastland (D.-Miss.), who very briefly welcomed the United States Attorneys and stated that he was pleased to have the opportunity to meet with them socially on this occasion. The Deputy Attorney General introduced Elliot L. Richardson, the newly designated Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, who was also present. Mr. Richardson told them that if they did not watch out they could see what would happen to a former United States Attorney, indicating that he himself had been one and was now on "the hot seat." The Deputy Attorney General then asked if I was in audience and I acknowledged my presence. He took this occasion to wish my wife and myself happy birthdays and commented that he wanted the United States Attorneys to know that the Director of the FBI whose men took their picture on the morning of June 12 had again shown his efficiency and cooperation because he has 150 of these photographs done in color now available to give to each of the United States Attorneys and other Departmental officials who were present in the photograph. He asked me to express to the Director his sincere appreciation again for the outstanding assistance of the FBI.

The reception broke up at approximately 8:30. During the evening scores of United States Attorneys came up to me and repeatedly spoke of their excellent relations with our Special Agents in Charge and our Agents and they spoke of the excellence of our investigations and our knowledge of the law. example, Mr. Robert B. Krupansky, United States Attorney for the Northern District of Ohio (Cleveland) could not say enough about SAC Cusick and our Agents for their outstanding and untiring efforts in both the Yablonski case and the Kent State case.

On Saturday morning, June 13, the small seminar groups of United States Attorneys continued meeting with various Department officials. I met and spoke with several of the United States Attorneys at their morning coffee break, and I attended the buffet luncheon served them in the courtyard of the Justice Building. At each of these events, those with whom I spoke were complimentary of the FBI and of the Director.

After lunch, the Civil Disturbance Seminar was held in the Great Hall. Deputy Attorney General Kleindienst acted as chairman. This portion of the conference was covered by Assistant Director Sullivan and associates who were designated by the Director to attend and participate.

On Saturday evening, I attended the Attorney General's Reception and Banquet for United States Attorneys held at the Department of State. The Deputy Attorney General introduced Attorney General Mitchell whose address reiterated the remarks made earlier by the President to the United States Attorneys. He spoke of the mission of the United States Attorneys and said they were the finest group of United States Attorneys to hold the office. I spoke with numerous United States Attorneys there and all exhibited a friendly attitude toward the FBI. Several remarked that Mr. Sullivan and his associates made excellent presentations and admirably represented the Bureau at the Civil Disturbance Seminar.

IN 1964 HE WAS ELECTED LIEUTENANT GOVERNORS OF MASSACHUSETTS AND IN 1966 WAS ELECTED MASSACHUSETTS ATTORNEY GENERAL.

THE WHITE HOUSE SAID FINCH WOULD CONTINUE TO HAVE CABINET RANK IN HIS NEW POSITION.

THE PRESIDENT DESCRIBED RICHARDSON AS "THE BEST QUALIFIED MAN IN THE COUNTRY" TO SUCCEED FINCH AND SAID SECRETARY OF STATE ROGERS COMPLAINED "ITS LIKE TAKING MY RIGHT ARM" WHEN HE ASKED FOR RICHARDSON TO FILL THE NEW JOB.

BUT NIXON SAID BOTH HE AND ROGERS FELT THAT THE "PPPORTUNITY TO GO UP...MUST NEVER BE DENIED."

RICHARDSON WILL ASSUME HIS NEW DUTIES AS SOON AS THE SENATE CONFIRMS HIM. "I BELIEVE THIS CHANGE IS IN THE BEST INTEREST OF THE WHOLE ADMINISTRATION.

ADD 3 FINCH, WASHINGTON

IN 1953 AND 1954 HE SERVED AS AN ASSISTANT TO SEN. LEVERETT
 SALTONSTALL AND WAS APPOINTED TO THE HEW POST IN 1956.

IN 1959 HE WENT BACK TO HIS HOME STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS TO ESTABLISH HIS OWN POLITICAL BASE AND WON A REPUTATION AS A HARD-HEADED ADMINISTRATOR AND INNOVATIVE LEADER.

AS UNDERSECRETARY OF STATE HE PARTICIPATED IN MEETINGS OF THE NATIONAL SECURITY COUNCIL AND SAT IN ON THE SPECIAL ACTION GROUP THAT ASSESSED CONDITIONS IN CAMBODIA AND SOUTHEAST ASIA PRIOR TO PRESIDENT
 NIXON'S CONTROVERSIAL DECISION TO SEND U.S. TROOPS INTO CAMBODIA.

FINCH, 44, WAS LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF CALIFORNIA WHEN NIXON PICKED HIM FOR THE HEW POST. BECAUSE OF HIS LONG AND CLOSE ASSOCIATION WITH THE PRESIDENT IT WAS THOUGHT BY MOST PEOPLE IN THE EARLY DAYS OF THE NIXON ADMINISTRATION THAT FINCH WOULD EMERGE AS THE STRONG MAN IN THE CABINET.

THIS, HOWEVER, WAS NOT THE CASE AND FINCH WAS COMING UNDER INCREASING CRITICISM FROM PEOPLE IN HIS OWN DEPARTMENT FOR FAILING TO ADVOCATE STRONGLY ENOUGH DOMESTIC PRIORITIES.

EXTREMIST MATTER - NYA
(OO:WFO)

Re WFO airtel, dated 5/9/73.

Referenced WFO communication contained information that WILLIAM L. PIERCE, Executive Director of the National Youth Alliance (NYA), extremist white youth organization at Washington, D. C. (WDC) is prepared to testify against the confirmation of Attorney General - designate, ELLIOT RICHARDSON, at hearings by the Senate Judiciary Committee on the basis of RICHARDSON's alleged record of drunken driving over a period of 19 years.

For the information of the Bureau, [redacted] advised on 5/16/73, that PIERCE continues to attend hearings of the Senate Judiciary Committee on the RICHARDSON confirmation as a prospective opposition witness. Source stated that RICHARDSON held an impromptu press conference following the hearings on 5/15/73. PIERCE reportedly was present and had the opportunity to ask whether RICHARDSON thought he ought to accept the position of Attorney General, in view of his "criminal record of hit-and-run driving." According to the source, RICHARDSON reportedly appeared embarrassed and irritated by PIERCE's question. He is said to have answered that the matter had come up before, and that he had never tried to "fix" a ticket. The source learned that RICHARDSON departed shortly thereafter.

Elliot L. Richardson

No Pickin' by Nixon: Scott

By JOSEPH VOLZ

Washington, May 10 (NEWS Bureau)—Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott (Pa.) told the Senate Judiciary Committee today that President Nixon had promised him that the White House would play no part in picking a special Watergate prosecutor or influencing his investigation.

Scott quoted the President during the Judiciary Committee's second day of hearings into Nixon's nomination of Defense Secretary Elliot L. Richardson to be attorney general. The panel members have indicated that they might not confirm Richardson unless he tells them who he's going to name as prosecutor.

Richardson insisted that the president does not even want to be informed about the probe. He said that Nixon told him that he should have an "arm's length" relationship with the White House.

Scott met with Nixon this morning and reported that the President said that the Watergate probe must "proceed without fear or favor . . . to tell the public the truth." On March 20, Nixon told Scott that "the White House has absolutely nothing to hide, and that is an authorized statement."

Richardson insisted again today that he must have "ultimate authority" over the special prosecutor.

At the White House, Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler announced the appointment of another aide to watch Watergate developments. Ziegler said that J. Fred Buzhardt, Richardson's former legal counsel at the Pentagon, would become "interim special counsel" at the White House.

Buzhardt will not conduct his own investigation for Nixon, who reported last summer that his former counsel John W. Dean Jr.

had investigated, and cleared White House aides.

Buzhardt was expected to play a key role in determining when witnesses appearing before the Senate Watergate committee could claim executive privilege and refuse to answer questions.

Leonard Garment, who replaced Dean as counsel, will continue to advise Nixon on Watergate, too, Ziegler said.

Ellsberg Questions About Richardson Prolong Hearing

BY DON IRWIN
Times Staff Writer

WASHINGTON—The Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday abruptly held up approval of Elliot L. Richardson's nomination as attorney general for a day-long exploration of questions generated by Daniel Ellsberg, former Pentagon Papers defendant.

Another meeting is expected to be called today by the committee chairman, Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss.).

There was no indication what effect the Tuesday proceedings would have on Richardson's nomination and thus on his promise to appoint Harvard Prof. Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor as soon as he is confirmed to the Justice Department post.

Meeting With Krogh

There was one basic issue before the committee: whether Richardson had been completely honest in testimony about a May 1 luncheon meeting with Egil Krogh Jr., former White House aide.

Richardson had said that Krogh sought advice about how he should disclose his involvement in the September, 1971, burglary of the Beverly Hills office of Dr. Lewis Fielding, Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

A question pursued throughout the day by Sen. John V. Tunney (D-Calif.) and other Democrats was whether Richardson had been aware that the crew that conducted the break-in under Krogh's direction had used equipment provided by the Central Intelligence Agency.

The senators also wanted to know why Richardson had not informed Judge Matt Byrne, who later dismissed the case against Ellsberg, that Krogh had referred to CIA documents during his testimony. Krogh did not mention this material support for the operation in a memorandum he submitted to Judge Byrne on May 4.

The hearing was reopened to pursue these questions — without any clear-cut final answers from Richardson — as the result of telephone calls Ellsberg made Tuesday morning to the offices of Tunny and Sens. Robert C. Byrd (D-W. Va.) and Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.).

The committee had been ready to approve the Richardson nomination before Ellsberg placed his calls.

Ellsberg, who sat in the audience throughout the day-long hearing, refused to answer reporters' questions about his calls to the three democrats.

Byrd told newsmen that Ellsberg, in talks with his aides, charged that Richardson had been "somewhat less than candid" in reporting on his talk with Krogh.

According to Byrd, Ellsberg expressed a strong belief that "Krogh had to be reassured by Richardson that it was all right not to mention the CIA involvement on grounds of national security—in other words to swear falsely in his affidavit to the court."

Security Problem

Richardson said Krogh was aware of the national security problem involved in disclosing his role in the Ellsberg break-in.

Richardson said Krogh called him May 2 to report that he had received a message from the President through Ehrlichman "that he was not to consider himself subject to any executive restraint in developing and filing his affidavit."

Richardson said he received the call shortly after he had met with Leonard Garment, acting counsel to the President, and William D. Ruckelshaus, acting director of the FBI, "to discuss cooperation with Judge Byrne's inquiry into the Ellsberg break-in."

He testified that Mr. Nixon had told him on April 29—when Richardson's designation for attorney general was discussed—of a decision that the facts on the Ellsberg break-in "should be brought to the attention of Judge Byrne."

Notes From Meeting

— plumbing operation (CIA documents and disguises). Cushman had told pre-sentence investigators that he authorized this." Under interrogation by Byrd, Tunney and Kennedy, Richardson said the reference to "other illegal activities" meant that the only illegal action was the break-in itself. But it was on the next sentence that the questions focused, and Richardson was unable to fill all the gaps.

After a luncheon break in the hearing, Richardson obtained from his office in the Pentagon—where he is still defense secretary—a transcription of notes he took during his conversation with Krogh. He said that J. T. Smith, his administrative assistant, sat in on the entire conversation.

The transcription became the subject of line-by-line questioning, with special emphasis on a paragraph that read in part:

"No other illegal activities anywhere were used

Richardson said he believed it referred to a statement by Gen. Robert H. ~~Richardson Jr.~~, former ~~director of the CIA~~ ~~probation officer~~ in the sentencing of those found guilty in the June 17 Watergate break-in. He discounted its significance in the Ellsberg case.

"I really didn't think in the context of the disclosure to Judge Byrne that . . . it was really material what (kinds of) aids (E. Howard) Hunt and (J. Gordon) Liddy had used to carry out the Ellsberg break-in," Richardson said, naming the agents of the White House "plumbers' group" who supervised the raid. (The "plumbers" had been assigned under a secret White House order to stop leaks of data related to national security, such as the Pentagon Papers.)

"Except that the CIA was being misused and subverted for illegal domestic purposes," Sen. Byrd said.

Richardson made his comments as he undertook to explain what committee members saw as a discrepancy between the reference to the CIA in his notes and a statement in Krogh's affidavit to Byrne that said "investigative support was unobtainable" from the CIA because it was barred by law from domestic intelligence activity.

Richardson said he believed Krogh had failed to mention the wigs and identification papers supplied to the Ellsberg raiders by the CIA, even though he reported Cushman's comments, because "he simply had not been told by Hunt or Liddy that, on the Ellsberg break-in, they had gone to the CIA for disguises and documents."

Even though this aid was "a little bizarre," Richardson said, ~~he~~ considered it "incidental" to Krogh's purposes at the time the former Administration aide came to him to discuss the manner in which he should tell Byrne of what he knew.

Byrd said the prime question raised by the Watergate affair was one of "candor and credibility." The committee was concerned, he said, that Richardson had been "something short of forthcoming."

Richardson, in reply, assured the committee that he had given "as full and complete account of this as I can give." He noted in passing that his testimony had, in effect, short-circuited the thorny issue of executive privilege, because it dealt in detail with confidential talks with the President and high Administration officials.

Re WFO airtel dated 5/16/73.

Enclosed for the Bureau is one copy each of a newspaper article concerning the confirmation hearing on Attorney General-designate ELLIOT RICHARDSON, from "The Washington Post", 5/16/73, and a letter to "The Washington Post" by WILLIAM L. PIERCE, dated 5/16/73.

Re WFO airtel contained information from [redacted] on 5/16/73, that WILLIAM L. PIERCE, Executive Director of the National Youth Alliance (NYA), extremist white youth organization at Washington, D.C., who opposed the confirmation of ELLIOT RICHARDSON for the position of Attorney General, had questioned RICHARDSON concerning his alleged criminal record of hit-and-run driving during an impromptu press conference following hearings by the Senate Judiciary Committee on 5/15/73.

It is noted that a story by GEORGE LARDNER, Jr., appearing in "The Washington Post and Times Herald", a daily newspaper published at Washington, D.C., on 5/16/73, confirmed information furnished by [redacted]. The informant on 5/25/73 furnished a copy of a letter written by PIERCE to "The Washington Post", dated 5/16/73, in response to LARDNER's story. A reproduction of the portion of LARDNER's article pertaining to PIERCE and a copy of PIERCE's letter to "The Washington Post" are enclosed for the Bureau.

For further information of the Bureau, the above informant advised on 5/23/73, that PIERCE did not appear in person as a witness against RICHARDSON at the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings but had read a prepared statement into the hearing record.

The above is furnished for information of the Bureau.

Top Choice Declines Probe Job

think the plan would establish the "public confidence" that is essential.

Meserve voiced his objections "solely as a citizen and lawyer" in a letter to Eastland and House Judiciary Chairman Peter Rodino Sr. (D-N.J.).

"With all deference to Mr. Richardson," Meserve said, "I believe that the prosecutor should not report to the Attorney General, particularly as to evidence, if any, which might be thought to involve the office of a President who has, three times, nominated Mr. Richardson to important public positions."

Now Secretary of Defense, Richardson has also served in the Nixon administration as Under Secretary of State and as Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

A longstanding friend of Richardson's, Meserve said he had "complete confidence" in Richardson's integrity. But he said the investigation must have the appearance of independence as well as the substance.

As a result, Meserve said he felt it would be best to set up "a special agency, with a separate and adequate budget, supervised by the independent prosecutor," even if special legislation is necessary.

Since the prosecutor ought to be accountable to some higher authority, Meserve suggested creation at the same time of a supervisory body or commission, perhaps composed of senior or retired federal judges.

Along with Republican senators on the Judiciary Committee, Richardson has taken the tack that the need for a special prosecutor to take over the far-flung investigations stemming from the Watergate break-in is too urgent to be postponed for the time needed to nurse new laws through Congress.

Beyond that, Richardson has said that he has no desire to be Attorney General if he cannot be trusted with "ultimate responsibility" for the Watergate case.

Skeptical Democrats on the committee have indicated that Richardson's confirmation will be held up until they have an opportunity to question the special prosecutor and examine the written charter of authority that Richardson has promised to give him.

Summarizing the dilemma at yesterday's session, Sen. Philip A. Hart (D-Mich.) said he was confident "that if the facts led to involvement of the President, Elliot Richardson, whether he had a special prosecutor or not, would name the President."

But, Hart said, "the real problem is if the facts don't involve the President, who will believe Elliot Richardson when he says the don't."

Richardson replied that it would be impossible, in any event, for a special prosecutor to "prove a negative." Prosecutors, he said, deal in courtroom verdicts, but, he emphasized, "a 'not guilty' verdict is not a declaration of innocence. ... If it is a negative that has to be proved, it may require some separate new mechanism," perhaps Sen. Sam J. Ervin's Senate investigating committee or a final review and report on all the investigations by an independent panel.

With the hearings adjourned yesterday afternoon "at the call of the chair," Richardson told reporters that he hopes to consult here before the end of the week with the three "finalists" for the prosecutor's job. They are former Deputy Attorney General Christopher, 47, now a Los Angeles lawyer; David W. Peck, 71, former presiding justice of the New York Supreme Court's appellate division, and Judge William H. Erickson, 49, of the Colorado Supreme Court.

Since each might have a variety of personal, financial and other reasons for not taking the post, Richardson said, he wants to sound them out first before making any more offers.

"It wouldn't be helpful to keep a scorecard on who's turned it down," Richardson said. He said he was anxious

"not to deprecate the job" with more refusals.

At that point, William Pierce of the far right National Youth Alliance, who has been attending the hearings in hopes of testifying against Richardson's confirmation, challenged Richardson on his old driving record. It reportedly involves more than a dozen traffic violations between 1938 and 1958, some involving liquor. Pierce demanded to know if that ought not disqualify him as Attorney General.

Richardson quietly replied that he thought not and said the subject had been thoroughly explored by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee when he was nominated as Under Secretary of State. Of his traffic record, he said: "If it shows anything, it shows at least that I never tried to fix a ticket."

Subject: Senate hearings on Richardson nomination

Mr:

The May 16 WASHINGTON POST article by George Lardner, Jr., on Attorney General-designate Elliot Richardson's appearance before the Senate Judiciary Committee gave an erroneous impression of the thrust of my challenge to Richardson on the basis of his police record.

Richardson's answer to my challenge was that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had thoroughly explored his police record at the time he was nominated to be Undersecretary of State and had, by implication, found nothing reprehensible, since his nomination was later confirmed by the Senate. The fact is that the Senate examined Richardson's record in only the most cursory manner and never looked at such details of that record as the police investigative reports of the various offenses of which he has been convicted. If the Senate had thoroughly examined the details of Richardson's police record, it is inconceivable that his nomination would have been confirmed, even if he were judged by present Washington standards of political morality.

What the record shows is that Richardson has been repeatedly involved, over a 20-year period, in such serious offenses as reckless driving, drunken driving, and hit-and-run driving. In a single offense, for which he was convicted in a Massachusetts court, all three of these elements were involved. In that case, furthermore, the record shows that Richardson lied to the investigating officer, denying involvement in a hit-and-run accident to which he later confessed. He also admitted being under the influence of liquor at the time of that accident.

The details of Richardson's police record clearly demonstrate a lack of integrity and strength of character that is deplorable for any high public official and intolerable for the nation's chief law enforcement officer, which Richardson aspires to be. I have been trying, therefore, during the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings to insure that the full details of Richardson's record will be exposed in public testimony and result in the Senate's having no choice but to refuse to confirm his appointment to be Attorney General.

Because of Richardson's role in formulating massive school busing plans while he was Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, he is the darling of Senate liberals--and, apparently, of the WASHINGTON POST. But the American people are getting tired of coverups, and any attempt to cover up Richardson's police record at this time or to minimize its seriousness will be a major disservice to the nation.

RICHARDSON 5-14

DAY LD

BY WESLEY G. PIPPERT

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- THE SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE RESUMES CONFIRMATION HEARINGS TODAY ON ELLIOT L. RICHARDSON'S NOMINATION TO BE ATTORNEY GENERAL. RICHARDSON IS EXPECTED TO NAME A SPECIAL WATERGATE PROSECUTOR BY THE WEEK'S END.

RICHARDSON TOLD THE COMMITTEE THURSDAY, AFTER TWO DAYS OF HEARINGS, THAT HE HOPED TO SUBMIT THE NAMES OF SIX OR EIGHT FINALISTS FOR THE POST OF SPECIAL PROSECUTOR TO THE FBI FOR SECURITY CHECKS AND WOULD ALSO SHOW THEM TO THE COMMITTEE.

RICHARDSON SAID HE HOPED TO NAME THE PROSECUTOR "BY THE END OF THE WEEK." HE PROBABLY WILL WIN CONFIRMATION HIMSELF BY THAT TIME.

THOMASSON SAID TYLER, A FORMER ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL IN CHARGE OF THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT'S CIVIL RIGHTS DIVISION UNDER PRESIDENT EISENHOWER, WAS IN WASHINGTON SUNDAY, APPARENTLY DISCUSSING THE MATTER WITH RICHARDSON.

THE WASHINGTON STAR-NEWS SAID FORMER SEN. WILLIAM B. SPONG, A VIRGINIA DEMOCRAT, IS A "LEADING CANDIDATE."

THE NAMING OF THE PROSECUTOR AND THE GUIDELINES UNDER WHICH HE WOULD OPERATE WERE THE KEY ISSUES IN WHAT WOULD OTHERWISE HAVE BEEN QUICK AND ROUTINE APPROVAL OF RICHARDSON, WHO WOULD BE SERVING IN HIS THIRD CABINET POST.

A NUMBER OF SENATORS HAVE SAID THEY WANT TO KNOW WHO THE PROSECUTOR WILL BE BEFORE THEY CONFIRM RICHARDSON.

BUT MORE CONTROVERSIAL WAS THE DEMAND--PRESSED BY SEN. EDWARD M. KENNEDY, D-MASS., AND BIRCH BAYH, D-IND.--THAT THE SPECIAL PROSECUTOR'S AUTHORITY IN ALL WATERGATE MATTERS BE FINAL.

DEMOCRATIC SENATORS HAVE SAID THAT IN ORDER TO AVOID ANY APPEARANCE THAT RICHARDSON, AS A MEMBER OF PRESIDENT NIXON'S OFFICIAL FAMILY, WAS DICTATING THE INVESTIGATION, THE INVESTIGATOR SHOULD BE COMPLETELY FREE AND INDEPENDENT.

RICHARDSON HAS SAID HE WILL GIVE THE PROSECUTOR "COMPLETE AUTHORITY" TO HANDLE THE CASE BUT THAT, AS ATTORNEY GENERAL, HE MUST RETAIN "ULTIMATE" AUTHORITY OVER HIM.

SEN. JOHN V. TUNNEY, D-CALIF., SAID THIS DISTINCTION BY RICHARDSON WAS "LIKE DANCING ON THE HEAD OF A PIN." TUNNEY SUGGESTED THAT ONE SOLUTION MIGHT BE FOR RICHARDSON TO SPELL OUT THE PROSECUTOR'S AUTHORITY AND SPECIFIC GUIDELINES.

Mr. Richardson had served as Secretary of Defense since January 30, 1973. He previously had served as Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare since June 24, 1970. He also served the Nixon Administration as Under Secretary of State from January 24, 1969, until assuming the leadership of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Mr. Richardson was born in Boston, Massachusetts, on July 20, 1920. He was graduated cum laude from Harvard College in 1941, and received his law degree, also cum laude, from Harvard Law School in 1947.

He enlisted in the U.S. Army in 1942 as a private and was a first lieutenant at the time of his honorable discharge in 1945. He served in the European Theater of Operations as a litter-bearer platoon leader with the 4th Infantry Division and landed with that Division on D-Day in Normandy. Mr. Richardson was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for Heroic Service and the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster. He is entitled to wear the Combat Medical Badge and the European Theater ribbon with arrowhead and five battle stars.

Upon graduation from the Harvard Law School in 1947, where he was president of the Law Review, Mr. Richardson served for a year as law clerk to Judge Learned Hand of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. The following year he was a law clerk for Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter.

From 1949 to 1953 and from 1955 to 1956, he was an associate in the Boston law firm of Ropes, Gray, Best, Coolidge & Rugg. In 1953 and 1954, Mr. Richardson served in Washington as assistant to Massachusetts Senator Leverett Saltonstall, who was then Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee. RE: CALL FROM OFFICE OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

I received a call from the Attorney General's secretary on Friday at 10:00 a. m. indicating that the Attorney General was desirous of sending a telegram to President Nixon and wondered if the FBI had facilities in Boise, Idaho, which would accomplish this. After checking with our Communications Section I found that we had no such facilities whereby the matter could be handled out of Boise but they suggested that the Attorney General might like to call the Butte Office, dictate the message to them and they in turn could send it in to Bureau Headquarters via their teletype. Thereafter, we would make arrangements to see that the telegram had been delivered. His secretary advised that she would inform the Attorney General of this and indicated that he may or may not proceed as indicated. I immediately called the Butte Office and alerted them to the situation and instructed that I be called immediately should the Attorney General submit his proposed communication.

In connection with above and as background, this security survey was predicated on a request by the Attorney General, who has recently been receiving a large number of nuisance calls on his unpublished telephone number at his residence. At the time this survey was conducted, officials of the telephone company suggested that these calls could be reduced by changing the unpublished telephone number and recommended that this be done. In addition, they advised all calls received on the old telephone number could be referred to the Attorney General's office.

Memorandum [Redacted] to Mr. White 8/22/73, advised that this security survey had been completed and that Mr. [Redacted] of the Department of Justice had been advised of the results, who then advised the Attorney General.

On 8/22/73, Laboratory Supervisor [Redacted] was in contact with Mr. Richard E. Mastrangelo, Associate Deputy Attorney General in the Department of Justice, who requested a memorandum setting forth any recommendations concerning the security of the telephone service at the Attorney General's residence. In addition, he advised all calls to the old telephone could be referred to the Attorney General's office.

Attached is a memorandum to Associate Deputy Attorney General Mastrangelo.

Attorney General Elliot Richardson spoke this afternoon at an assembly of the ABA which was held at the Sheraton Park Hotel. He was introduced by the current President, Mr. Robert Meserve.

In his speech, the Attorney General advised that he has been charged by the President to redevelop confidence in the Department of Justice. There is no place for politics in the Department and he has asked his principal officials to curtail their political activities.

Mr. Richardson advised that he is issuing an order directing that all contacts of Departmental personnel be made a matter of record. This however does not include contacts by members of the news media.

He advised that he is considering setting up a new position within the Department to be known as the Office of Inspector General. This office would possibly act as an inspection force within the Department. In line with this, he also advised that he is contemplating setting up a new division within the Department to handle management and budget. This new division would concern itself with budget matters for each agency within the Department and indicated that more detailed justification would be required for expenditures.

Mr. Richardson commented on the Freedom of Information Act advising that the Department guidelines regarding these requests were to be followed in each instance. Specifically, he mentioned that he would not defend any agency within the Department if they declined any information requested without first advising the Office of Legal Counsel within the Department.

Re: AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION ANNUAL MEETING

Mr. Richardson went on to advise that he wants a better relationship established between the National Association of Attorneys General and will set up liaison in the Department with this organization.

Regarding interviews of news media personnel by investigators, Mr. Richardson advised he was considering that they were not to be initiated by Department personnel without his specific approval. Mention was made of the FBI Uniform Crime Report that was issued on August 8, 1973, but was not critical of the report. He merely stated that he would look for reasons for the decline in the figures.

Prior to Mr. Richardson's speech, William D. Ruckelshaus was introduced, but he did not address the gathering.

Richardson Seeks Crime Tools

By Margaret Gentry

Associated Press

Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson thinks the government has failed to develop ways of judging the effectiveness of crime-fighting efforts and of measuring the volume of crime.

Richardson said in an interview that correcting those faults will be among his major priorities in the job he began two months ago.

His statements were his first public remarks about the shortcomings of the crime fight launched under former Attorney General John N. Mitchell as a major thrust of President Nixon's first term.

Richardson had no direct comment on Mitchell's leadership of the effort.

He said that before the government can find ways to curb crime, it must know how much crime there is. The FBI crime index measures only a fraction of the murders, rapes and thefts committed in this country, he said.

Numerous critics have complained that the FBI crime statistics are inaccurate. Those critics have accused the Justice Department and local police agencies of manipulating the figures for political advantage in election years.

But no attorney general in recent years has so strongly discounted the FBI reports. Richardson did so only a few days ago.

"We have no mechanism in place for measuring the volume of crime committed," he said. "We have the FBI index, which measures the number of crimes that are recorded in police documents. But it is universally recognized that only a fraction of all crimes committed are reported to the police at all."

He noted that the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration is testing a way of using polling techniques to compile crime data. He said he is encouraged that the experiment may lead to more accurate crime data.

Richardson complained that the department lacks the staff and the procedures to measure the effects of crime-fighting programs. In the past, he said, the department plunged into one or another aspect of the crime fight without weighing the impact on other components of the criminal justice system.

"One of the ironies of this department is that it has been preaching this sort of proposition to the states and it has given to the states hundreds of millions of dollars to improve their ability for comprehensive criminal justice planning," Richardson said.

Although the department has been the elements of the criminal justice system except the courts, we have been doing none of this ourselves."

making arrests through the improvement of police procedures ... what does that do to the rest of the system?

"You may actually undercut the objectives of better law enforcement if all you have done is improve police capabilities," he continued.

Such a blind approach, he said, overloads prosecutors and courts, leaves many suspects on the streets awaiting trial, encourages plea bargaining to bypass trials, and ultimately shatters public faith in the criminal justice system.

Richardson said that correcting those faults will be among his major priorities in the job he began two months ago.

His statements in an interview were his first public remarks since taking office about the shortcomings of the crime fight launched under former Attorney General John N. Mitchell as a major thrust of President Nixon's first team.

Richardson had to direct comment on Mitchell's leadership of the effort.

Before the government can find ways to curb crime, Richardson said, it must know how much crime there is.

The FBI crime index measures only a fraction of the murders, rapes and thefts committed in this country, he said.

Critics have complained that the FBI crime statistics are inaccurate and have accused the Justice Department and local police agencies of manipulating the figures for political advantage in election years.

But no attorney general in recent years has so strongly discounted the FBI reports. Richardson did so only a few days before he is to announce the completed figures for 1972.

Testing Poll Technique

"We have no mechanism in place for measuring the volume of crime committed," he said. "We have the FBI index which measures the number of crimes that are recorded in police documents. But it is universally recognized that only a fraction of all crimes committed are reported to the police at all."

He said that the law enforcement assistance administration is testing a way of using polling techniques to compile crime data, and added that he is encouraged that the experiment may lead to more accurate crime data.

In the past, he said, the department has plunged into one or another aspect of the crime fight without weighing the impact on other components of the criminal justice system.

"One of the ironies of this department is that it has been preaching this sort of proposition to the states and it has given to the states hundreds of millions of dollars to improve their ability for comprehensive criminal justice planning," Richardson said. "And yet, although this department embraces all of the elements of the criminal justice system except the courts, we have been doing none of this ourselves."

At 6:50 pm, October 20, 1973, General Haig of the White House phoned me at Kansas City, Missouri. He said that Elliot Richardson had resigned and Deputy Attorney General Ruckelshaus had been discharged and that Acting Attorney General Robert Bork had been designated. He said Bork had been instructed to discharge Special Prosecutor Cox.

This would mean, he said, that there would have to be a surveillance put on Cox's headquarters and that he felt further that attention should be given to the office of departing Deputy Attorney General Ruckelshaus. He said that he would like to have these offices watched so that no documents would go out of them. He cautioned that this should be done in an appropriate and inoffensive way with no strong-arm "stuff" exercised. He said as a generalization that he did not want anything to leave which is a part of the investigation which has been conducted as a result of the Watergate inquiries.

As a result of this, I immediately phoned Assistant Director Miller after having unsuccessfully tried to locate Associate Director Callahan. I relayed to Mr. Miller the gist of the above and he said he would contact the Washington Field Office at once in order to place appropriate guards to follow the instructions of General Haig.

The Honorable Clarence M. Kelley
Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation
Washington, D. C.

Dear Clarence:

Your speech to the National Newspaper Association expresses a very perceptive and constructive approach to the relationships between law enforcement and the news media. It is a theme which I hope will have broad exposure in the coming months. Henry Kissinger touched on a similar theme--the need for mutual respect and understanding between policy makers and critics--in a recent speech. A copy of it is enclosed and the relevant portion marked on page 4.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

As Prepared for Delivery

TEXT OF SPEECH OF THE HONORABLE HENRY A. KISSINGER
SECRETARY OF STATE
(PACEM IN TERRIS CONFERENCE
SHERATON-PARK HOTEL
WASHINGTON, D.C.
OCTOBER 8, 1973

(FOR RELEASE UPON DELIVERY, EXPECTED AT 8:45 PM E.D.T. MONDAY, OCTOBER 8.)

The Nature of the National Dialogue

This is an important anniversary. A year ago today - on October 8 - came the breakthrough in the Paris negotiations which led soon afterward to the end of American military involvement in Viet-Nam. It is strangely difficult now to recapture the emotion of that moment of hope and uncertainty when suddenly years of suffering and division were giving way to new possibilities for reconciliation.

We meet, too, at a time when renewed conflict in the Middle East reminds us that international stability is always precarious and never to be taken for granted. Pacem in Terris remains regrettably elusive. However well we contain this crisis as we have, contained others, we must still ask ourselves what we seek beyond the management of conflict.

The need for a dialogue about national purposes has never been more urgent and no assembly is better suited for such a discussion than those gathered here tonight.

Dramatic changes in recent years have transformed America's position and role in the world:

-- For most of the postwar period America enjoyed predominance in physical resources and political power. Now like most other nations in history, we find that our most difficult task is how to apply limited means to the accomplishment of carefully defined ends. We can no longer overwhelm our problems; we must master them with imagination, understanding and patience.

-- For a generation our preoccupation was to prevent the Cold War from degenerating into a hot war. Today, when the danger of global conflict has diminished, we face the more profound problem of defining what we mean by peace and determining the ultimate purpose of improved international relations.

ENCLOSURE

-- For two decades the solidarity of our alliances seemed as constant as the threats to our security. Now our allies have regained strength and self-confidence, and relations with adversaries have improved. All this has given rise to uncertainties over the sharing of burdens with friends and the impact of reduced tensions on the cohesion of alliances.

-- Thus even as we have mastered the art of containing crises, our concern with the nature of a more permanent international order has grown. Questions once obscured by more insistent needs now demand our attention: What is true national interest? To what end stability? What is the relationship of peace to justice?

It is characteristic of periods of upheaval that to those who live through them, they appear as a series of haphazard events. Symptoms obscure basic issues and historical trends. The urgent tends to dominate the important. Too often goals are presented as abstract utopias, safe-havens from pressing events.

But a debate to be fruitful must define what can reasonably be asked of foreign policy and at what pace progress can be achieved. Otherwise it turns into competing catalogues of the desirable rather than informed comparisons of the possible. Dialogue degenerates into tactical skirmishing.

The current public discussion reflects some interesting and significant shifts in perspective:

-- A foreign policy once considered excessively moralistic is now looked upon by some as excessively pragmatic.

-- The Government was criticized in 1969 for holding back East-West trade with certain countries until there was progress in their foreign policies. Now we are criticized for not holding back East-West trade until there are changes in those same countries' domestic policies.

-- The Administration's foreign policy once decried as too cold-war oriented is now attacked as too insensitive to the profound moral antagonism between Communism and freedom.

One consequence of this intellectual shift is a gap between conception and performance on some major issues of policy:

-- The desirability of peace and detente is affirmed but both the inducements to progress and the penalties to confrontation are restricted by legislation.

-- Expressions of concern for human values in other countries are coupled with failure to support the very programs designed to help developing areas improve their economic and social conditions.

-- The declared objective of maintaining a responsible American international role clashes with nationalistic pressures in trade and monetary negotiations and with calls for unilateral withdrawal from alliance obligations.

It is clear that we face genuine moral dilemmas and important policy choices. But it is also clear that we need to define the framework of our dialogue more perceptively and understandingly.

The Competing Elements of Foreign Policy

Foreign policy must begin with the understanding that it involves relationships between sovereign countries. Sovereignty has been defined as a will uncontrolled by others; that is what gives foreign policy its contingent and ever incomplete character.

For disagreements among sovereign states can be settled only by negotiation or by power, by compromise or by imposition. Which of these methods prevails depends on the values, the strengths and the domestic systems of the countries involved. A nation's values define what is just; its strength determines what is possible; its domestic structure decides what policies can in fact be implemented and sustained.

Thus foreign policy involves two partially conflicting endeavors: defining the interests, purposes and values of a society and relating them to the interests, purposes and values of others.

The policy maker, therefore, must strike a balance between what is desirable and what is possible. Progress will always be measured in partial steps and in the relative satisfaction of alternative goals. Tension is unavoidable between values, which are invariably cast in maximum terms, and efforts to promote them, which of necessity involve compromise. Foreign policy is explained domestically in terms of justice. But what is defined as justice at home becomes the subject of negotiation abroad. It is thus no accident that many nations, including our own, view the international arena as a forum in which virtue is thwarted by the clever practice of foreigners.

In a community of sovereign states, the quest for peace involves a paradox: the attempt to impose absolute justice by one side will be seen as absolute injustice by all others; the quest for total security for some turns into total insecurity for the remainder. Stability depends on the relative satisfaction and therefore also the relative dissatisfaction of the various states. The pursuit of peace must therefore begin with the pragmatic concept of coexistence -- especially in a period of ideological conflict.

We must, of course, avoid becoming obsessed with stability. An excessively pragmatic policy will be empty of vision and humanity. It will lack not only direction, but also roots and heart. General de Gaulle wrote in his memoirs that "France cannot be France without greatness." By the same token America cannot be true to itself without moral purpose. This country has always had a sense of mission. Americans have always held the view that America stood for something above and beyond its material achievements. A purely pragmatic policy provides no criteria for other nations to assess our performance and no standards to which the American people can rally.

But when policy becomes excessively moralistic it may turn quixotic or dangerous. A presumed monopoly on truth obstructs negotiation and accommodation. Good results may be given up in the quest for ever elusive ideal solutions. Policy may fall prey to ineffectual posturing or adventuristic crusades.

The prerequisite for a fruitful national debate is that the policy makers and critics appreciate each other's perspectives and respect each other's purposes. The policy maker must understand that the critic is obliged to stress imperfections in order to challenge assumptions and to goad actions. But equally the critic should acknowledge the complexity and inherent ambiguity of the policy maker's choices. The policy maker must be concerned with the best that can be achieved, not just the best that can be imagined. He has to act in a fog of incomplete knowledge without the information that will be available later to the analyst. He knows -- or should know -- that he is responsible for the consequences of disaster as well as for the benefits of success. He may have to qualify some goals not because they would be undesirable if reached, but because the risks of failure outweigh potential gains. He must often settle for the gradual, much as he might prefer the immediate. He must compromise with others, and this means to some extent compromising with himself.

The outsider demonstrates his morality by the precision of his perceptions and the loftiness of his ideals. The policy maker expresses his morality by implementing a sequence of imperfections and partial solutions in pursuit of his ideals.

There must be understanding, as well, of the crucial importance of timing. Opportunities cannot be hoarded; once past, they are usually irretrievable. New relationships in a fluid transitional period -- such as today--- are delicate and vulnerable; they must be nurtured if they are to thrive. We cannot pull up young shoots periodically to see whether the roots are still there or whether there is some marginally better location for them.

We are now at such a time of tenuous beginnings. Western Europe and Japan have joined us in an effort to reinvigorate our relationships. The Soviet Union has begun to practice foreign policy -- at least partially -- as a relationship between states rather than as international civil war. The People's Republic of China has emerged from two decades of isolation. The developing countries are impatient for economic and social change. A new dimension of unprecedented challenges -- in food, oceans, energy, environment -- demands global cooperation.

We are at one of those rare moments where through a combination of fortuitous circumstances and design man seems in a position to shape his future. What we need is the confidence to discuss issues without bitter strife, the wisdom to define together the nature of our world as well as the vision to chart together a more just future.

Detente with the Soviet Union

Nothing demonstrates this need more urgently than our relationship with the Soviet Union.

This Administration has never had any illusions about the Soviet system. We have always insisted that progress in technical fields, such as trade, had to follow -- and reflect -- progress toward more stable international relations. We have maintained a strong military balance and a flexible defense posture as a buttress to stability. We have insisted that disarmament had to be mutual. We have judged movement in our relations with the Soviet Union, not by atmospherics, but by how well concrete problems are resolved and by whether there is responsible international conduct.

Coexistence to us continues to have a very precise meaning:

-- We will oppose the attempt by any country to achieve a position of predominance either globally or regionally.

-- We will resist any attempt to exploit a policy of detente to weaken our alliances.

-- We will react if relaxation of tensions is used as a cover to exacerbate conflicts in international trouble spots.

The Soviet Union cannot disregard these principles in any area of the world without imperiling its entire relationship with the United States.

On this basis we have succeeded in transforming U.S.-Soviet relations in many important ways. Our two countries have concluded an historic accord to limit strategic arms. We have substantially reduced the risk of direct U.S.-Soviet confrontation in crisis areas. The problem of Berlin has been resolved by negotiation. We and our allies have engaged the Soviet Union in negotiations on major issues of European security including a reduction of military forces in Central Europe. We have reached a series of bilateral agreements on cooperation -- health, environment, space, science and technology, as well as trade. These accords are designed to create a vested interest in cooperation and restraint.

Until recently the goals of detente were not an issue. The necessity of shifting from confrontation toward negotiation seemed so overwhelming that goals beyond the settlement of international disputes were never raised. But now progress has been made -- and already taken for granted. We are engaged in an intense debate on whether we should make changes in Soviet society a precondition for further progress -- or indeed for following through on commitments already made. The cutting edge of this problem is the Congressional effort to condition most-favored-nation trade status for other countries on changes in their domestic systems.

This is a genuine moral dilemma. There are genuine moral concerns -- on both sides of the argument. So let us not address this as a debate between those who are morally sensitive and those who are not, between those who care for justice and those who are oblivious to humane values. The attitude of the American people and government has been made emphatically clear on countless occasions, in ways that have produced effective results. The exit tax on emigration is not being collected and we have received assurances that it will not be reapplied; hardship cases submitted to the Soviet Government are being given specific attention; the rate of Jewish emigration has been in the tens of thousands where it was once a trickle. We will continue our vigorous efforts on these matters.

But the real debate goes far beyond this: Should we now tie demands which were never raised during negotiations to agreements that have already been concluded? Should we require as a formal condition internal changes that we heretofore sought to foster in an evolutionary manner?

Let us remember what the MFN question specifically involves. The very term "most favored nation" is misleading in its implication of preferential treatment. What we are talking about is whether to allow normal economic relations to develop -- of the kind we now have with over 100 other countries and which the Soviet Union enjoyed until 1951. The issue is whether to abolish discriminatory trade restrictions that were imposed at the height of the Cold War. Indeed, at that time the Soviet Government discouraged commerce because it feared the domestic impact of normal trading relations with the West on its society.

The demand that Moscow modify its domestic policy as a precondition for MFN or detente was never made while we were negotiating; now it is inserted after both sides have carefully shaped an overall mosaic. Thus it raises questions about our entire bilateral relationship.

Finally the issue affects not only our relationship with the Soviet Union, but also with many other countries whose internal structures we find incompatible with our own. Conditions imposed on one country could inhibit expanding relations with others, such as the People's Republic of China.

We shall never condone the suppression of fundamental liberties. We shall urge humane principles and use our influence to promote justice. But the issue comes down to the limits of such efforts. How hard can we press without provoking the Soviet leadership into returning to practices in its foreign policy that increase international tensions? Are we ready to face the crises and increased defense budgets that a return to Cold War conditions would spawn? And will this encourage full emigration or enhance the well-being or nourish the hope for liberty of the peoples of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union? Is it detente that has prompted repression -- or is it detente that has generated the ferment and the demand for openness which we are now witnessing?

For half a century we have objected to communist efforts to alter the domestic structures of other countries. For a generation of Cold War we sought to ease the risks produced by competing ideologies. Are we now to come full circle and insist on domestic compatibility as a condition of progress?

These questions have no easy answers. The government may underestimate the margin of concessions available to us. But a fair debate must admit that they are genuine questions, the answers to which could affect the fate of all of us.

Our policy with respect to detente is clear: We shall resist aggressive foreign policies. Detente cannot survive irresponsibility in any area, including the Middle East. As for the internal policies of closed systems the United States will never forget that the antagonism between freedom and its enemies is part of the reality of the modern age. We are not neutral in that struggle. As long as we remain powerful we will use our influence to promote freedom, as we always have. But in the nuclear age we are obliged to recognize that the issue of war and peace also involves human lives and that the attainment of peace is a profound moral concern.

The World As It Is And The World We Seek

Addressing the United Nations General Assembly two weeks ago, I described our goal as a world where power blocs and balances are no longer relevant; where justice, not stability, can be our overriding preoccupation; where countries consider cooperation in the world interest to be in their national interest.

But we cannot move toward the world of the future without first maintaining peace in the world as it is. These very days we are vividly reminded that this requires vigilance and a continuing commitment.

So our journey must start from where we are now. This is a time of lessened tension, of greater equilibrium, of diffused power. But if the world is better than our earlier fears, it still falls far short of our hopes. To deal with the present does not mean that we are content with it.

The most striking feature of the contemporary period -- the feature that gives complexity as well as hope -- is the radical transformation in the nature of power. Throughout history power has generally been homogeneous. Military, economic and political potential were closely related. To be powerful a nation had to be strong in all categories. Today the vocabulary of strength is more complex. Military muscle does not guarantee political influence. Economic giants can be militarily weak, and military strength may not be able to obscure economic weakness. Countries can exert political influence even when they have neither military nor economic strength.

It is wrong to speak of only one balance of power, for there are several which have to be related to each other. In the military sphere, there are two super powers. In economic terms, there are at least five major groupings. Politically, many more centers of influence have emerged; some 80 new nations have come into being since the end of World War II and regional groups are assuming ever increasing importance.

Above all, whatever the measure of power, its political utility has changed. Throughout history increases in military power -- however slight -- could be turned into specific political advantage. With the overwhelming arsenals of the nuclear age, however, the pursuit of marginal advantage is both pointless and potentially suicidal. Once sufficiency is reached, additional increments of power do not translate into usable political strength; and attempts to achieve tactical gains can lead to cataclysm.

This environment both puts a premium on stability and makes it difficult to maintain. Today's striving for equilibrium should not be compared to the balance of power of previous periods. The very notion of "operating" a classical balance of power disintegrates when the change required to upset the balance is so large that it cannot be achieved by limited means.

More specifically, there is no parallel with the nineteenth century. Then, the principal countries shared essentially similar concepts of legitimacy and accepted the basic structure of the existing international order. Small adjustments in strength were significant. The "balance" operated in a relatively confined geographic area. None of these factors obtain today.

Nor when we talk of equilibrium do we mean a simplistic mechanical model devoid of purpose. The constantly shifting alliances that maintained equilibrium in previous centuries are neither appropriate nor possible in our time. In an age of ideological schism the distinction between friends and adversaries is an objective reality. We share ideals as well as interests with our friends, and we know that the strength of our friendships is crucial to the lowering of tensions with our opponents.

When we refer to five or six or seven major centers of power, the point being made is not that others are excluded but that a few short years ago everyone agreed that there were only two. The diminishing tensions and the emergence of new centers of power have meant greater freedom of action and greater importance for all other nations.

In this setting, our immediate aim has been to build a stable network of relationships that offers hope of sparing mankind the scourges of war. An interdependent world community cannot tolerate either big power confrontations or recurrent regional crises.

But peace must be more than the absence of conflict. We perceive stability as the bridge to the realization of human aspirations, not an end in itself. We have learned much about containing crises, but we have not removed their roots. We have begun to accommodate our differences, but we have not affirmed our commonality. We may have improved the mastery of equilibrium, but we have not yet attained justice.

In the encyclical for which this conference is named, Pope John sketched a greater vision. He foresaw "that no political community is able to pursue its own interests and develop itself in isolation" for "there is a growing awareness of all human beings that they are members of a world community."

The opportunities of mankind now transcend nationalism, and can only be dealt with by nations acting in concert:

-- For the first time in generations mankind is in a position to shape a new and peaceful international order. But do we have the imagination and determination to carry forward this still fragile task of creation?

-- For the first time in history we may have the technical knowledge to satisfy man's basic needs. The imperatives of the modern world respect no national borders and must inevitably open all societies to the world around them. But do we have the political will to join together to accomplish this great end?

If this vision is to be realized, America's active involvement is inescapable. History will judge us by our deeds, not by our good intentions.

But it cannot be the work of any one country. And it cannot be the undertaking of any one Administration or one branch of government or one party. To build truly is to chart a course that will be carried on by future leaders because it has the enduring support of the American people.

So let us search for a fresh consensus. Let us restore a spirit of understanding between the legislative and the executive, between the government and the press, between the people and their public servants. Let us learn once again to debate our methods and not our motives, to focus on our destiny and not on our divisions. Let us all contribute our different views and perspectives but let us, once again, see ourselves as engaged in a common enterprise. If we are to shape a world community we must first restore community at home.

With Americans working together, America can work with others toward man's eternal goal of a Pax in Terris -- peace abroad, peace at home and peace within ourselves.

Dear Clarence:

Many thanks for the immensely able assistance that you and your very fine agency provided me during my tenure as Attorney General.

I believe the entire Nation is fortunate that you agreed to take on the challenges of directing the FBI. I know you to be man enough for the task in every respect.

I regret that our professional relationship has been foreshortened but know that our friendship will continue.

BIOGRAPHICAL DATA

Mr. Richardson was born on July 20, 1920, in Boston, Massachusetts. He is married to the former Anne Francis Hazard, [REDACTED]. He received B.A. and LL.B. degrees, both cum laude, in June, 1941, and June, 1947, respectively, from Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts. He served on active duty in the United States Army both as an enlisted man and as an officer from 1942 to 1945. Mr. Richardson was a practicing attorney in Boston, Massachusetts, during the early 1950's except for a brief period during 1953 and 1954, when he was assistant secretary to Leverett Saltonstall, then United States Senator from Massachusetts. He thereafter served from 1957 to 1959 as Assistant Secretary for Legislation, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. He was the United States Attorney for Massachusetts from 1959 to 1961, and during 1961 he also served as a Special Assistant to the Attorney General of the United States. He returned to the practice of law in Boston, Massachusetts, in 1961, and thereafter served as Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts from 1965 to 1967, and as Attorney General of Massachusetts from 1967 to 1969. In 1969, he became Under Secretary of State and thereafter served successively as Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare; Secretary of Defense; and Attorney General of the United States. He resigned from the latter position on October 20, 1973, following his refusal to discharge Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox. He is currently affiliated with the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C.

INFORMATION IN BUREAU FILES

We conducted applicant-type investigations concerning Mr. Richardson in 1953, 1956, 1959, and 1969. These investigations disclose he has several traffic arrests, including one in May, 1939, for "operating under the influence", for which he was fined $50. During the 1969 investigation an anonymous telephone call was received at the campaign headquarters of former President Richard M. Nixon alleging Mr. Richardson has many arrests for drunken driving. This was not substantiated by investigation. Only one person commented unfavorably in 1969 concerning Mr. Richardson's sobriety stating he had heard from an unrecalled source that Mr. Richardson had "fallen on his face" at a party. Extensive investigation was conducted but no other indications of excessive drinking were developed. It is noted that during his confirmation hearing on January 15, 1969, Mr. Richardson admitted the 1939 drunken driving arrest as well as his other traffic arrests.

Bureau files further disclose Mr. Richardson was interviewed on May 23, 1974, at the request of the Special Prosecution Force concerning any knowledge he might possess concerning an organization for the elderly known as the Federation of Experienced Americans. This request was based on allegations received by the Special Prosecution Force that in early 1972, Charles Colson, former Special Counsel to the President, and others, helped establish the Federation of Experienced Americans. Further, that although the corporate charter of this organization indicated its purpose was to aid elderly Americans, there is evidence which indicates its major purpose was to assist the reelection campaign of former President Nixon. Mr. Richardson acknowledged he had been spoken to by Mr. Colson, but said the request of Mr. Colson that the organization be awarded a grant by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare was denied. The results of the interview of Mr. Richardson are contained in the report of SA [redacted] dated July 15, 1974, at Washington, D. C., captioned "Federation of Experienced Americans; Independent Old Americans; FAG-Conspiracy", and was furnished to the Special Prosecution Force on July 26, 1974.

Honorable Clarence M. Kelley
Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation
Washington, D.C.

Dear Clarence:

Recently I received a letter from Mrs. [redacted] requesting my assistance in gaining access to the Bureau's reports concerning [redacted] her late husband for [redacted] a professor at Colgate University, who is writing a diplomatic history of Mr. [redacted] career.

Mrs. [redacted] advised me that you had already turned down a request from Mr. [redacted] and from [redacted] but I would appreciate your reconsideration.

As I'm sure you know, [redacted] was a distinguished Foreign Service Officer whose career was cut short because he had the wisdom to foresee the fate of China and the courage to state the facts as he knew them to be. The story of his career should be told, and I believe the FBI reports will be useful in helping Mr. [redacted] do a more complete and accurate story.

Thank you for your consideration.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

Elliot L. Richardson

Dear Elliot:

This will acknowledge receipt of your letter of October 29th and your recent telephone conversation with my associate, [redacted] pertaining to the release of information in our files concerning Mr. [redacted]

I can certainly appreciate [redacted] interest in this particular request and your desire that the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act, and particularly Departmental Order 528-73, have been complied with in spirit and intent and, therefore, feel the following data will explain our position. As Mr. [redacted] pointed out to you, since there have been no definitive guidelines made available to this Bureau setting forth who or what might be of "historical interest," in cases where the concept is questionable, we are compelled to deny the request and suggest to the requester that he may appeal our denial to the Attorney General. This merely involves writing to the Department and advising that the correspondent is appealing the denial of the FBI's request for certain data. Following the receipt of such a communication, representatives of the Department's Office of Legal Counsel then consider the merits of the denial. Such a procedure allows for guidelines to be formed on individual cases.

I trust the above will assist you in replying to [redacted]. May I also take this opportunity to express my thanks for your thoughtfulness in inquiring about my welfare and that of my family through Mr. [redacted]. I, of course, was indeed happy to hear that everything is going so well for you.

Sincerely yours,

Clarence M. Kelley

State Department has requested investigation of Richardson who is being considered for Presidential appointment, position not indicated. He is former Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, and former Attorney General of the United States.

We conducted applicant-type investigations of Richardson in 1953, 1956, 1959, and 1969, which were favorable with the exception of a traffic arrest in May, 1939, for "operating under the influence," for which he was fined $50. He admitted this arrest as well as other traffic citations during confirmation hearings on January 15, 1969, for the position of Under Secretary of State.

ACTION:

Case has been ordered separately to field and field has been instructed to conduct no neighborhood without prior Bureau approval. You will be advised of any unusual developments.

The files of the Office of Security (SY), Department of State, reviewed by SA [REDACTED] on December 13, 1974, disclose the additional information that on January 17, 1969, SY granted the appointee Final Clearance for Top Secret as Under Secretary of State, valid for 180 days only, unless appointed in the meantime. On January 17, 1969, Mr. [REDACTED] State for Administration, personally approved security clearance for the appointee to receive a Presidential Appointment. These clearances were based upon a full field investigation by the FBI.

The file shows that the appointee was granted CENTO and SEATO clearance by SY on February 7, 1969. SY granted him COSMIC clearance on February 14, 1969.

The file contained a copy of the April 4, 1969, issue of "The Herald of Freedom," a copy of which is attached. The file also shows that this article was reprinted in the Congressional Record on April 23, 1969, at the request of Congressman JOHN R. RARICK of Louisiana.

The SY file does not show any termination of clearance concerning this individual; however, SY has advised that all its clearances terminate when the person's relationship with the Department of State terminates.

THOSE "NUMBER TWO" MEN

STATE "Number Two" Richardson and PENTAGON "Number Two" Packard are two more international men in an international-minded administration. Both have been directors of World Affairs Councils which have taken over the propaganda and "educational" activities of the discredited Institute of Pacific Relations. One was picked for his high post in spite of his lack of experience and the other in spite of an obvious conflict of interest due to his company's defense contracts.

Elliot Lee Richardson was born in Boston, Mass. on July 20, 1920, the son of Dr. Edward P. Richardson and the former Miss Clara Shattuck. He graduated from Harvard with an A.B. degree in 1941 and obtained his L.L.B. from Harvard Law School in 1947, after having served in the U.S. Army from 1942 to 1945. At Harvard he was editor of The Law Review. He married Miss Anne Frances Hazard August 2, 1952; they have three children, Henry, Anne Hazard and Michael.

Richardson's first position (1947-8) was as law clerk to the famous judge, Learned Hand who was at that time superior judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Judicial Circuit. As of 1949 Judge Learned Hand had completed forty years on the Federal bench, having first been appointed by President Taft in 1901. His thousands of decisions were described by Felix Frankfurter as "an enduring source of truth-seeking and illumination."

Richardson then became a law clerk to the great Frankfurter himself from 1948 to 1949. Frankfurter by then had progressed from being a Harvard law professor, who had been supplying law clerks to Supreme Court and Federal judges for many years, to being a Supreme Court Justice (appointed by F.D. Roosevelt January 5, 1939). Frankfurter's pro-Bolshevik-Communist bias is well known and was stated in a letter written to him by Theodore Roosevelt on December 19, 1917, in which he stated:

"...you have taken, and are taking on behalf of the Administration an attitude which seems to me to be fundamentally that of Trotsky and the other Bolshevik leaders in Russia; an attitude which may be fraught with mischief to this country.... Here again you are engaged in excusing men precisely like the Bolsheviks in Russia, who are murderers and encouragers of murder, who are traitors to their allies, to democracy, and to civilization, as well as to the United States, and whose acts are nevertheless apologized for on grounds, my dear Mr. Frankfurter, substantially like those which you allege."

Among Frankfurter's proteges at Harvard were such subversives as J. Robert Oppenheimer, Lawrence Duggan, Harry Dexter White, Alger Hiss (for whom Frankfurter was a character witness), Lee Pressman, Harold Glasser and Owen Lattimore. Frankfurter was on the National Committee of the American Civil Liberties Union with such (subsequently identified) Communists as William Z. Foster, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Louis Budenz and Scott Nearing. He was an intimate of Harold Laski who taught with him at Harvard and then went to the London School of Economics and established what became known in academic circles as the "Frankfurter-Laski Axis." Laski eventually secured a teaching post in Moscow.

From 1949 to 1953 Richardson was with the Boston law firm of Ropes, Gray, Best, Coolidge and Rugg, having been admitted to the Massachusetts Bar. In 1952 he was also a lecturer on law at Harvard. From 1953 to 1954 he was a staff assistant to U.S. Senator Leverett Saltonstall, after which he went back to his law firm from 1954 to 1956. Saltonstall was a former governor of Massachusetts who was elected to fill the unexpired term of Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. who resigned from the U.S. Senate February 1944. Saltonstall was known as a "liberal Republican" because of his stand on civil liberties and international cooperation. He was a sponsor of U.S.-Soviet "Friendship Rallies" and of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship of which Corliss Lamont was chairman.

In January, 1957 Richardson was appointed by President Eisenhower to be Assistant Secretary for Legislation in the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. His present boss, Rogers, was then Attorney General of the United States and in 1959 Richardson was appointed U.S. Attorney in Massachusetts under Rogers. The N.Y. TIMES tells us that "During those years Mr. Richardson was widely regarded as one of the brighter and more creative spirits in an Administration that was not noted for them. He became identified with the moderate, even liberal, wing of Republican thought. "One of the "several notable convictions" won by U.S. Atty. Richardson was that of Bernard Goldfine.

When the Eisenhower Administration was succeeded by the Kennedy Kingdom, Richardson was selected to be a special assistant to Attorney General Bobby Kennedy. He tried in 1962 for the Republican nomination for Massachusetts Attorney General but lost in the primary to Edward W. Brooke, now the U.S. Senator from Mass. He was a partner in the firm of Ropes and Gray from 1961 to 1964 at which time he was elected Lt. Governor of Massachusetts. In 1966 Richardson ran for Attorney General of Massachusetts and allowed his second cousin, Francis W. Sargent to run for the position he then held as Lt. Governor. This was a maneuver which supposedly was to make the ticket stronger. It resulted in Sargent taking over as governor when President Nixon appointed Governor Volpe to be U.S. Secretary of Transportation.

In his 1966 campaign for Attorney General, Richardson was assailed for making charges against his opponent that he could not substantiate (N.Y. TIMES, 1/5/69). A more interesting item, however, was the long list of DEMOCRATS who supported REPUBLICAN Richardson. In the RECORD AMERICAN (Boston) of Nov. 4, 1966 a full page advertisement stated: "The office of Attorney General is too important. . . . that is why we and thousands of other Massachusetts Democrats support Elliot Richardson for Attorney General." Among the signers were Henry Commager and Adam Yarmolinsky. The ad also carried a quote from John F. Kennedy, Washington, 1956: "I want to show the very high regard in which Mr. Richardson is held by all who know him, including myself. I have worked with him on many occasions in the past and always found him to be extremely able, dependable and fair-minded." Richardson was also supported by the Americans for Democratic Action (ADA).

The endorsement of Adam Yarmolinsky should be enough to warn anyone against the endorsee. Yarmolinsky attended Harvard at the same time as Richardson, graduating two years later. During his sojourn at Harvard Yarmolinsky was head of the Marxist Club, a founding member and editor of the Marxist magazine, YARDLING, which presented the views of the Young Communist League. He admitted attending meetings of the Communist Youth League and an investigation by the Army into his left-wing background quoted him as stating, "They (the Young Communist League) believed and I was inclined to believe that a so-called Communist government was a desirable end." As a free-wheeling commissar in the Defense Department during the Kennedy Kingdom, Yarmolinsky was instrumental in trying to destroy the morale of the Armed Forces of the United States. High-ranking military personnel had their every word and action carefully scrutinized by Adam and his "Whizz-Kids." He became so powerful under (?) McNamara that reportedly no one could be hired, assigned or discharged at the Pentagon without his O.K. Exposure forced Yarmolinsky out of public life but he continued and continues to be active "behind the scenes."

Endorsement by Yarmolinsky did not mitigate against Richardson and he was elected Attorney General of Massachusetts. One of his more regrettable acts in this capacity was granting permission for a "documentary" film to be made of the inmates at the Bridgewater State Hospital for the criminally insane. These unfortunates were photographed in their degenerate and private activities and the film, entitled "Titticut Follies," was shown and is still being shown commercially. It is from this post that Mr. Richardson moves into his new position of Number Two man in American diplomacy as Under Secretary of State.

He is quite acceptable to the "Liberal Establishment" in spite of his "limited experience in foreign affairs." The N.Y. TIMES of January 1, 1969, in announcing the selection of Richardson, stated:

"Although Mr. Richardson has no official experience for the Under Secretaryship, he has traveled widely. In 1961, as president of the World Affairs Council in Boston, he visited Africa for a first-hand look at emerging nations. He has also attended policy seminars at Salzburg, Austria."

With the Institute of Pacific Relations thoroughly discredited and exposed by extensive hearings and investigations, its work did not cease but was continued by other groups. The internationalists have never ceased to propagandize and among the "educational" organizations through which they work are the various regional World Affairs Councils. In the House of Representatives report of hearings on Tax-Exempt Foundations appears a document called Recommendations of the President to the Trustees (Carnegie Endowment for International Peace) signed by Alger Hiss and published in the 1947 yearbook of that organization. It states in part:

"Among the special circumstances favorable to an expansion of the endowments own direct activities, the most significant is the establishment of the United Nations with its headquarters in New York, and with the United States as its leading and most influential member.

"The United States (via Alger Hiss - Ed.) was the chief architect of the United Nations and is its chief support. The opportunity for an endowed American institution having the objectives, traditions, and prestige of the endowment, to support and serve the United Nations is very great. No other agency appears to be so favorably situated as is the endowment for the undertaking of such a program.

"So far as we have been able to ascertain, no other agency is contemplating the undertaking of such a program. Consequently, I recommend most earnestly that the endowment construct its program for the period that lies ahead primarily for the support and the assistance of the United Nations. I would suggest that this program be conceived of as having two objectives. First, it should be widely educational in order to encourage public understanding and support of the United Nations at home and abroad. Second, it should aid in the adoption of wise policies, both by our own Government in its capacity as a member of the United Nations, and by the United Nations Organization as a whole.

"The number and importance of decisions in the field of foreign relations with which the United States will be faced during the next few years are of such magnitude that the widest possible stimulation of public education in this field is of major and pressing importance. In furthering its educational objective, the endowment should utilize its existing resources, such as the international-relations clubs in the colleges and international conciliation, and should strengthen its relationships with existing agencies interested in the field of foreign affairs. These relationships should include close collaboration with other organizations principally engaged in the study of foreign affairs, the Institute of Pacific Relations, the developing university centers of international relations, the Council on Foreign Relations, the Foreign Policy Association, and local community groups interested in foreign affairs, of which the Cleveland Council on World Affairs and the projected World Affairs Council in San Francisco are examples.

"Of particular importance is the unusual opportunity of reaching large segments of the population by establishing relations of a rather novel sort with the large national organizations which today are desirous of supplying their members with objective information on public affairs, including international issues. These organizations, designed to serve, respectively, the broad interests of business, church, women, farm, labor, veterans, educational, and other large groups of our citizens, are not equipped to set up foreign policy research staffs on their own. The endowment should supply these organizations with basic information about the United Nations, and should assist them both in selecting topics of interest to their members and in presenting those topics so as to be most readily understood by their members.

"We should urge the Foreign Policy Association and the Institute of Pacific Relations to supply similar service on other topics of international significance. Explanation should also be made by the endowment as to the possibilities of increasing the effectiveness of the radio and motion pictures in public education on world affairs."

What Hiss was describing and recommending was a huge brainwashing operation to be performed on the American public. Such organizations as the Foreign Policy Association and the World Affairs Councils, fronting for the Council on Foreign Relations, pretend to be "non-partisan" and educational but are strictly World Government propagandists. Richardson has been closely associated with this as a member of the board of directors and president of the World Affairs Council of Boston.

Mr. Richardson was described by the N.Y. TIMES as having all the attributes of the proper Bostonian, family background, and "the distinctive New England upper-class way of talking." We are told, however, that his intimates know him "as a great party man with a robust sense of humor, a good dancer and avid skier, even an adventurer." Drew Pearson was not quite so kind in his comments, recollecting that Richardson had a good record in government and was "a far-sighted HEW executive" but he had a problem - alcoholism. It sounds strange, coming from Pearson, but he states:

"It is a firm rule of the State Department that an alcoholic is a security risk. The theory is that he's subject to blackmail, or can be indiscreet under the influence of liquor and leak security information."

Citing a record of fifteen automobile arrests for Richardson, Pearson states that his first brush with the law was at the age of nineteen when he was arrested on May 6, 1939, at 8:30 P.M. for operating under the influence of liquor on Beacon Street in Boston. Pearson quotes the arresting officer as stating: "Richardson was very abusive at the time of his arrest and threatened to have me fired." After pleading guilty to the offense, Richardson was fined $75 and his license was suspended. For an offense in April, 1951, Richardson pleaded guilty and was fined $200 and his license suspended. This was for striking a stop sign and going through a hedge at 2 a.m. in Brookline, Mass. Of his numerous arrests, three involved driving under the influence of liquor and most of the others involved speeding.

Richardson is a long-time close personal friend of Secretary of State Rogers who has explained his choice as "springing mainly from a desire to have as his deputy someone with whom he is personally close and compatible, a man who would serve as his 'alter ego." Both are members of the Eastern liberal wing of the Republican party."

Number two man in that other important government department, Defense, comes out of the West and, like Richardson, has been connected with a World Affairs Council, having become a director of the World Affairs Council of Northern California in 1958. David Packard was born in Pueblo, Colorado, September 7, 1912, the son of Sperry Sidney Packard and Ella Lorna Graber. He received his A.B. degree from Stanford University in 1934 and his E.E. in 1939, having worked for the General Electric Company in Schenectady, N.Y. from 1935 to 1938. He married Miss Lucile Laura Salter on April 8, 1938 and they have four children—David Woodley (a professor of humanities at the University of California at Los Angeles), Nancy Ann, Susan and Julie Elizabeth.

Packard is a self-made multi-millionaire electronic instrument manufacturer. His appointment caused raised eyebrows because of a "conflict-of-interest" possibility due to the fact that his firm did $34 million worth of business with the Defense Department last year and another $7 million with other federal agencies and had $60 million in sales to government prime contractors. Some sort of a trust arrangement has reportedly been made to make everything proper but Packard has said he has no intention of living on his $30,000 government salary.

Packard founded his company thirty years ago with his partner, William R. Hewlett, in a garage with an initial investment of less than $600. The company, which is the designing and production of electronic measuring instruments, was incorporated in 1947 and now produces more than 2,000 different types of instruments in 17 plants and employs 13,000 persons.

Last year Hewlett-Packard embarked on a "long-range program to increase its sale of non-strategic products in Eastern Europe." Packard carried on correspondence with Sen. Walter Mondale, who strongly favors East-West "bridge-building," and disclosed that his firm had assigned several sales engineers to full-time duty behind the Iron Curtain "traveling in the territory and providing on-the-spot assistance to the East European purchasers and users." The firm participated in different fairs, shows and exhibitions and Packard stated: "We anticipate this new effort will cause our East European sales to more than double in 1968, with an even further substantial increase the following year." He was unhappy, however, because the firm's sales were limited by the "high level of unilaterally imposed U.S. export controls."

Packard cited "better understanding" as a reason for lowering U.S. controls to allow a larger volume of East-West trade. "We believe a larger volume of East-West trade and will contribute to a better understanding, without in any sense providing substantial aid which would strengthen our enemies, or potential enemies." Unfortunately it is not "understanding" he is after but "money." He is described as a "contemporary man" who "doesn't try to pack everything into an ideological box." He reportedly counts himself a fan of former Secretary of Defense McNamara, stating, "McNamara did a very good job in the over-all job. But I hope we can do a better job."

It has been pointed out that Packard's description of his products as "non-strategic" is not quite accurate as these highly sophisticated instruments used in electronics and analytical chemistry could definitely have military application. It could just be, therefore, that our new "Number Two" man in the Defense Department has been aiding and abetting an enemy against whom we are in active combat. It has been pointed out that weaknesses such as excessive drinking are exploited by the Communists and used by them for blackmail purposes, making a person with such a failing a security risk. It could well be that our "Number Two" man in the State Department has placed himself at the mercy of our enemies and can be manipulated by them because of a present or past drinking problem. As two of the earlier Nixon appointments, Richardson and Packard lead the sorry parade of dubious appointees. Their connection with the World Affairs Councils indicates their World Government bias and undoubtedly was a factor in their selection.

Reference is made to my memorandum dated 12-11-74, which advised of the receipt of a request for investigation of Richardson for a Presidential appointment, position not indicated. Press reports have indicated that he is under consideration for the position of Ambassador to Great Britain.

Applicant-type investigations concerning Richardson were conducted in 1953, 1956, 1959, and 1969, which were favorable, except for a traffic arrest in May, 1939, for "operating under the influence" for which he was fined $50. During confirmation hearings in January, 1969, for the position of Under Secretary of State, he admitted this arrest as well as other traffic violations. Current inquiry favorable and complete, except for checks of three governmental agencies.

Bureau files reveal that Richardson was interviewed on two occasions in May, 1974, in connection with requests for investigations received from the Watergate Special Prosecution Force (WSPF) during April, 1974. The first concerned the 1972 "Departmental Responsiveness Program" which allegedly was a proposed program for improving departmental responsiveness in support of the re-election of former President Richard M. Nixon. Richardson, who was Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare in 1972, recalled having discussed this program with representatives of The White House and it was his recollection that emphasis was to be placed on giving advance notice of grants and awards to incumbent Republican candidates so that announcements could be made by these individuals to further their political interests. He stated he did not have the impression that anything improper or illegal was expected in connection with this program and he pointed out that a member of his staff actually was the point of contact with The White House in connection with this program.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

During the course of a conversation today, First Assistant United States Attorney Andrew A. Caffrey told me of the warm reception which you gave him and U. S. Attorney Elliot L. Richardson during their visit to Washington.

b7C

Mr. Caffrey was most profuse in his appreciation of your generosity in spending so much time with them and for the opportunity of meeting with you.

The Bureau has known Mr. Caffrey for some time and although Mr. Richardson is but newly appointed, he has shown a fine disposition towards the Bureau.

I thought you would be interested in having Mr. Caffrey's reaction to their Washington visit.

Sincerely,

Becomes Assistant To Atty.-Gen.

Richardson Gets New U.S. Post

(Traveler Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — Atty. Gen.
Robert F. Kennedy has named outgoing U.S. Atty. Elliot Richardson of Boston as a special assistant, it was learned today.

The appointment came after the Senate confirmed the nomination of Boston lawyer W. Arthur Garrity Jr. as U.S. attorney from Massachusetts succeeding Richardson.

WORKING ON ROAD, GOLDFINE CASES

The Justice Dept. acknowledged Richardson's appointment.

Richardson is a 40-year-old former assistant secretary of Health, Education and Welfare in the Eisenhower administration. He has been directing investigations into the Massachusetts highway scandals and the Bernard Goldfine tax case.

The Senate confirmed Garrity, a 40-year-old Democrat who lives in Wellesley, as the new U.S. attorney yesterday only a few hours after the Senate Judiciary Committee reported favorably on his nomination.

The Justice Dept. didn't specify Richardson's tasks. But it was understood he was being retained to continue prosecution of the tax complicated Goldfine and highway cases.

GIVES DATA TO U. S. JURY

Richardson has been presenting evidence to a Federal Grand Jury in Boston since December on allegations of wrongdoing in right-of-way landtaking in Massachusetts' federal-aid highway program.

Simultaneously, he has been preparing the government's case against Goldfine, the gift-giving Boston industrialist accused of evading $800,000 in federal income to ~~avoid~~ prosecution of the tax.

the Arts and Humanities, that there be a limitation of 1 hour for debate on that amendment, the time to be equally divided between the mover of the amendment and the manager of the bill, and that a vote occur on that amendment no later than 2 p.m. tomorrow.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

ORDER TO TEMPORARILY LAY ASIDE THE UNFINISHED BUSINESS UNTIL DISPOSITION OF PENDING AMENDMENT

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business on tomorrow be laid aside temporarily and remain in a temporarily laid aside status until the vote on the disposition of the amendment to the now pending measure.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SPECIAL PROSECUTION FOR WATERGATE INVESTIGATION

Mr. PERCY, Mr. President, taking into account the schedule on the calendar on tomorrow, it would be the intention of the Senator from Illinois to be on the floor of the Senate at the beginning of the morning hour. If my calculations are correct, that would be approximately between 12:30 and 12:45.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD, Mr. President, the Senator is talking about morning business.

Mr. PERCY. I am talking about morning business; the Senator is correct.

It would be the intention of the Senator from Illinois at that time to ask for unanimous consent that the vote of the Senate taken on Senate Resolution 105 today be vitiated and that the resolution be made the pending business of the Senate at some designated time that would fit into the calendar of the Senate, taking into account that such unanimous consent would provide for adequate time for discussion, but a time certain for a vote.

The Senator from Illinois would be willing to have a voice vote or a rollcall vote. I so serve notice.

The Senator from Illinois is extremely sorry that this matter could not be resolved this evening. The Senator from Illinois is willing to stay on the floor of the Senate until a solution can be found that would be equitable and fair to all of the various interests represented. This procedure I have enunciated seems to be the only procedure now remaining to the Senator from Illinois, taking into account the rights of the cosponsors of the resolution and also the desires of distinguished colleagues to have an adequate opportunity to express their opinions on the sense of the Senate resolution.

Mr. COTTON, Mr. President, I am surprised at the remarks of the Senator from Illinois because the Senator from New Hampshire insisted on a live quorum. At the request of the distinguished acting majority leader, the Senator from New Hampshire agreed to withdraw his insistence on a live quorum at this time on the agreement, as the Senator from New Hampshire understood it, that there would be no more discussion of the matter we have been discussing—namely the resolution of the Senator from Illinois—tonight. It was understood that it would not be kicked around any further.

I do not blame the Senator from Illinois for not wanting to go to bed tonight without getting himself out from under the situation of not having this thing settled, and objecting to reconsideration. However, he did not do this. He is perfectly right in doing it in the future. However, it was with the distinct understanding, and it was my understanding, that the Senator from Illinois agreed that I would withdraw my insistence on a live quorum if this matter was not going to be discussed or kicked around any more.

It so happens that the Senator from New Hampshire may not be able to be present. However, if he can be present when this request is made on tomorrow, there will be an objection because there are engagements this week that make it necessary if this thing is going to be thrashed out that it should be done next week, rather than this week.

Furthermore, in view of the fact that the Senator from Illinois has seen fit after our understanding to take the floor and give notice of his intention, I will give notice of my intention. My intention is that this thing stay where it is, passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table and an effort to resurrect it objected to by the Senator from Illinois. It will stay where it is or we are going to have full freedom to discuss this matter.

And there will be no agreement—the Senator from New Hampshire can be present or have someone represent him—for limited time. So if the Senator from Illinois thinks he is going to resurrect this matter and get out from under the situation as it now lies, and give us an hour to discuss a reflection on the integrity of the President of the United States and the Attorney General designee, I will not disillusion him, there will be an objection. We are either going to bring this thing to life fully, just as it was formed, with no abortion, or we are going to let it lie where it is in its grave, and let the world read the tombstone.

PROGRAM

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD, Mr. President, the program for tomorrow is as follows:

The Senate will convene at 12 o'clock noon.

After the two leaders or their designees have been recognized under the standing order, the following Senators will be recognized, each for not to exceed 15 minutes under the order stated: Senators BELLMON, GRIFFIN, and ROBERT C. BYRD.

There will then be a period for the transaction of routine morning business with statements limited therein to 3 minutes, the period not to extend beyond the hour of 1 p.m.

At 1 p.m. the Senate will resume its consideration of the Proxmire amendment presently pending to the bill on the National Arts and Humanities.

There will be a 1-hour limitation of debate thereon and at no later than the hour of 2 p.m. a vote will occur on that amendment.

Immediately upon the disposition of the pending amendment, the Senate will resume consideration of the unfinished business.

Yea-and-nay votes may occur in the course of the afternoon.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD, Mr. President, I move that the Senate stand in adjournment, in accordance with the previous order, until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and at 7:51 p.m. the Senate adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, May 2, 1973, at 12 o'clock noon.

[redacted] placed emphasis upon the arrest of May 11, 1951, in Brookline, Massachusetts, stating that in this case Mr. Richardson did not come forward to the police department until he was confronted with evidence that he had left the scene of an accident. [redacted] had a full report of this accident and the investigation at his command. This information is as follows:

"Brookline District Court No. 937

"On May 11, 1951, pleaded guilty to the charge of operating to endanger lives and safety of the public.

"Fine of two hundred ($200.00) dollars imposed. No appeal taken. Fine paid.

"The offence took place on April 22, 1951, when the defendant's car, proceeding along Dean Road, Brookline, and making a right turn on Clark Road, struck a Stop sign located in front of No. 347 Clark Road, then travelled through a hedge at the sidewalk line but did not come in contact with the house in back of the hedge. The defendant came into the Brookline Police Station and made an oral report to the officer during the course of which he admitted that he had been drinking. The written report signed by the defendant is as follows:

'Turning the corner of Clark Road (from Dean Road), I failed to turn sharply enough. My car struck a No Parking sign on the right hand shoulder of the road, knocking down the sign, and in an attempt to bring the car back on the road, I turned the car too hard to the left. The car crossed the road, rode upon the sidewalk and passed between a post and parked car on the right hand a hedge on the left. The bumper of my car passed the hedge, tearing off twigs and leaves. I then brought my car back onto the roadway and proceeded. Signed.'

"The report was dated May 11, 1951, and given at 12:30 p.m. on that date.

"The police records of this accident contain photographs of the sign as it appeared after having been knocked over and the torn hedge.

"The following is a report of the investigation:

"On about 11:30 a.m., April 22, 1951, I commenced investigation of a reported hit-and-run property damage accident. The accident occurred at about

ELLIOT LEE RICHARDSON

"2:00 a.m. this date in front of No. 349 Clark Road, Brookline. A Ford Convertible, Massachusetts registration 150,040, had collided with a 'No Parking This Side of the Street' sign on the southerly lawn of No. 349 Clark Road, 50 feet from the corner of Dean Road and a hedge surrounding the property of Robert Gustin, 349 Clark Road. The hedge is on the northerly side of Clark Road. Investigation disclosed the car, 1950 Ford Convertible, owned and operated by the defendant. I observed the car in the rear of No. 617 Boylston Street. There was no visible damage to the car. From around the front bumper I removed shrubbery, twigs, etc. on the bumper and front plate similar to No. 349 Clark Road.

"I interviewed the defendant at this time and asked him if he had an accident last night or this morning and he said no. I asked him about the hedge and twigs in front of his car and he said he could not account for them. I asked him where he was and he said at a party in Cambridge. I asked him if he had been drinking and he said yes. He stated he had been drinking cocktails. I asked him if he was drunk and he said he did not think so. I said 'you were at least under the influence of liquor' and he said he guessed that he was. I asked him his route home and he said he could not say about this morning but usually he came over Larz Anderson to Boston, up Commonwealth to Summit and Corey, across Beacon and all streets to Dean Road, to either Clark or Clinton to Sumner to Boylston and home. I again asked him if he remembered colliding with the side and hedge and he said as I mentioned it he vaguely remembered something about it.

[redacted]

[redacted] stated no one was with the operator. Defendant stated that there was no one with him when he returned from Cambridge."

[redacted] stated also he has one additional piece of information, however, he is not prepared to testify to this information since it is an allegation without being substantiated. He stated this information is as follows:

Mr. Edward P. Richardson, apparently the father of Elliot Richardson, left to [redacted] Elliot Richardson of 613 Boylston Street, Brookline, Massachusetts, certain property. On September 17, 1954, the State of Massachusetts took a strip of this land to widen the highway and the alleged compensation for the property and the improvement of the property was excessive. This excessive payment was due to Elliot Richardson's influence with the then governor of Massachusetts, Governor Volpe.

He stated he has the following additional information concerning this allegation:

On January 6, 1955, an initial settlement was made to Mr. Richardson in the amount of $7,000 cash. During the summer of 1955 for the relocation and improvement of a wall a sum of $30,000 was paid by the state. In August, 1956, no specific date, further work for improvement of the property was made by the state, however, he has no figures and no additional information concerning this particular improvement.

[redacted] stated that his purpose in furnishing this information concerning Mr. Richardson was to let it be known that Mr. Richardson, upon his driving and "apparently drinking" record should be impeached from the position of Attorney General of the United States.

A characterization of the National Youth Alliance and the National Socialist White People's Party are attached hereto.

Attached hereto is a copy of an article entitled "Secretary of Defense is Habitual Drunken Driver", which appeared on page 1 of the May, 1973, edition of the newspaper "Attack", which is published by the National Youth Alliance.

NATIONAL YOUTH ALLIANCE

The National Youth Alliance (NYA) is an organization originally formed from a nucleus of Youth for (George C.) Wallace supporters following the 1968 Presidential election for the purpose of countering radical leftist and anarchist influences which were then considered to be fomenting chaotic conditions on the campuses of American colleges and universities.

The NYA program promoted by its former National Organizer, Louis T. Byers, opposed the use of dangerous drugs and narcotics; Black Power; anarchist, Marxist, and other radical groups on campus; and opposed American involvement in the "no-win" war in Vietnam. NYA dedicated itself to the preservation of "Western" culture and the eradication of Zionist influences from American life.

Following reorganization in the latter part of 1970, NYA headquarters was established at 1656 33rd Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. The new NYA organization was chartered by the State of Virginia on October 14, 1970, and control was vested in Byers as President; Robert A. Lloyd, III, Vice President and William L. Pierce, Secretary-Treasurer. Lloyd and Pierce are former officials of the National Socialist White People's Party who left the party following an abortive power play in the Summer of 1970.

NYA publishes a tabloid newspaper, "Attack!", and an internal newsletter, "Action," under the editorship of William L. Pierce. In the Summer, 1970, (Number 6), issue of "Attack!", an editorial statement declared it was no longer possible to cure "the System" by constitutional means and suggested the ultimate possibility of violent revolution. It stated that NYA had the responsibility for accepting a leading position in coming revolutionary developments.

NATIONAL SOCIALIST WHITE PEOPLE'S PARTY,
Also Known As THE AMERICAN NAZI PARTY,
AMERICAN NAZIS, THE WORLD UNION OF FREE ENTERPRISE NATIONAL SOCIALISTS, THE
GEORGE LINCOLN ROCKWELL PARTY

On March 30, 1971, a source advised that The American Nazi Party - World Union of Free Enterprise National Socialists (ANP-WUFENS) was organized by George Lincoln Rockwell at Arlington, Virginia, on February 26, 1956. It was based upon the concept of an international "National Socialist" movement, as espoused by the German Nazi Party, which was headed by Adolf Hitler. The ANP-WUFENS supports and follows the line of hatred against Negroes, Jews and communists through speeches, published literature, demonstrations and publicity-seeking devices for the purpose of seeking a legitimate dominant political party within the United States and in foreign countries.

"The Richmond News Leader" issue dated April 4, 1963, published daily at Richmond, Virginia, stated that this organization is chartered in the State of Virginia as "The George Lincoln Rockwell Party" and that the Virginia Assembly prohibits the use of "Nazi" or "National Socialism" in a Virginia-chartered organization. As of January 1, 1967, the official name of this organization was changed to "National Socialist White People's Party," according to Commander Rockwell.

On August 25, 1967, George Lincoln Rockwell was assassinated in Arlington, Virginia, near the ANP headquarters building. The August 28, 1967, issue of the "Northern Virginia Sun," a daily newspaper published at Arlington, Virginia, stated that Matthias Koehl, Jr., took command of the Party after Rockwell's assassination.

Secretary of Defense Is Habitual Drunken Driver

Elliot Richardson, Nixon's ultra-liberal Secretary of Defense, has a record of drunken-driving arrests spanning more than 19 years. He has been arrested a score of times, both in the District of Columbia and in his home state of Massachusetts, for speeding, running stop signs, reckless driving, and operating a motor vehicle so as to endanger the lives and safety of the public.

In nearly all of Richardson's arrests testimony of the arresting officers indicated that he was intoxicated, but in all but two instances he was allowed to plead guilty to lesser charges and avoid drunken-driving convictions. In the other two cases his intoxication was so obvious that not even his money and political influence could save him from convictions for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Interestingly enough, Richardson's entire record of habitual drunken driving is contained in FBI files, and was, therefore, available to both Nixon and to the members of the Senate committee which recommended the confirmation of his appointment as Secretary of Defense. The record was also available, in Massachusetts and D. C. courts, to any enterprising newspaper reporter who cared to have a look.

During his Senate confirmation hearings, however, it was as if the word had been quietly passed to the members of the Armed Services Committee that "the big boys" wanted Richardson to be confirmed without any fuss. For thus it was done: slick as a whistle, with no trace of the critical probing that has been directed at other recent appointees.

Whether any news reporters tried to get their editors to print the story of Richardson's drunkenness is unknown, but the controlled press certainly did keep a tight lid on the matter. Jack Anderson and the Washington Post, who seem to have no trouble getting their hands on the FBI's most closely guarded files under other circumstances, had not a word to breathe against the Richardson confirmation.

The American people will have the misfortune of finding out in the years ahead just why "the big boys" want a man like Elliot Richardson — a man with such a weak character that he has repeatedly drunken high off into his automobile and careened off the streets and highways in his automobile in total disregard for the public safety — to head one of the most critical and sensitive posts in our government.

Friendly Panel Ready to Act On Richardson

By JOY ASCHENBACH
Star-News Staff Writer

Elliot L. Richardson's nomination to be attorney general came before a friendly Senate Judiciary Committee today for a vote and was expected to be acted on quickly by the full Senate, perhaps by tonight.

Before calling the 16 committee members into a closed session for the vote, Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., said he expected Richardson to receive unanimous approval in the committee and little opposition on the Senate floor.

Committee members, who have held five days of hearings on Richardson's nomination, withdrew their objections after he named Harvard law professor Archibald Cox, a Democrat, special Watergate prosecutor and agreed to give him maximum independence.

DEMOCRATIC Whip Robert C. Byrd, of West Virginia, also a member of the committee, said yesterday he would vote for Richardson, but reluctantly, because he would have preferred the new attorney general be "a fresh name and a fresh face" from outside the administration.

Because of the Watergate scandal, he said, he believed that the appointment of Richardson, who has been a member of the Nixon Cabinet for three years, was "regrettable and unfortunate." Richardson has served as under secretary of State, secretary of Health Education and Welfare and secretary of Defense.

supporting Richardson's confirmation, Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., said he has "gone a long, long way in allaying our fears" about the independence of the Watergate investigation. Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., who had initially suggested that Richardson disqualify himself from the Watergate case, said yesterday that Richardson had "pretty well nailed down the degree of independence that will allow people of this country to believe in" the investigation.

Richardson and Cox appeared jointly before the committee yesterday and pledged to pursue the investigation wherever it leads, even to the President. Richardson, as attorney general, will retain final authority over the case, but has assured the senators that the special prosecutor will have full independence in conducting it.

COX, WHO WAS solicitor general during the John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson administrations, told the committee that "for all practical purposes 'full' means 'final'" and the attorney general was "committed not to interfere with the special prosecutor."

Cox said he was ready to begin the investigation immediately and had no obligations left at Harvard except to direct 350 examination papers. He is prepared to take over as soon as he is officially appointed, after Richardson is sworn in.

The final draft of the guidelines, worked out between Richardson and the committee, state that the attorney general will "not countermand or interfere with the special prosecutor's decisions or actions. The special prosecutor will determine whether and to what extent he will inform or consult with the attorney general (about the case) . . . and will not be removed from his duties except for extraordinary improprieties."

Cox said the "only authority Mr. Richardson retained is to give me hell if I don't do the job, and I think he ought to keep that authority." Cox also said he believes he has the right to refuse a White House or presidential request for information on the case if he determines that it would jeopardize the investigation.

AT THE suggestion of Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., Cox agreed to maintain a detailed record of all conversations he has about the Watergate case, including any with Richardson.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., asked Cox whether he believed he had been given "a blank check" to seek immunity for witnesses. Both Cox and Richardson said that Cox's requests for immunity would be approved by the attorney general without objection.

Cox, whose position carries the rank and salary ($38,000) of an assistant attorney general, will be free to hire his own staff and submit his own budget, which will receive priority treatment within the Justice Department.

ALTHOUGH most of the questioning of Richardson on the final day of the hearing focused on the role of the special prosecutor, he was also asked for his views on other controversies that he would have to deal with as attorney general.

Richardson, disagreeing with his predecessor Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst, said that he agrees with the Supreme Court's decision in June requiring that wiretaps of domestic subversives for national security purposes should not be used without prior court authorization. Previously only the attorney general's signature was necessary.

Richardson said he considers wiretapping "a necessary evil" that should be used with limitations "because it is evil."

In response to questions from Kennedy, he said he favored laws requiring the registration of all handguns and the licensing of persons who use them. This goes beyond President Nixon's recent statement calling for the registration of the "Saturday night special."

Richardson said FBI files which include information on members of Congress obtained after their election should be destroyed because it is a practice that could lead to abuse.

Richardson Confirmation Likely After New Quizzing

By JOY ASCHENBACH

Star-News Staff Writer

Elliot L. Richardson, subjected to an unexpected sixth day of interrogation on his nomination to be attorney general, was expected to win Senate confirmation before Congress recesses tomorrow for the long Memorial Day weekend.

Members of the Judiciary Committee, who have been considering the nomination for two weeks, planned today to review the transcript of Richardson's testimony before voting on confirmation, perhaps later today.

Although Richardson was called back yesterday for a session in which committee members for the first time publicly questioned his candor, Senate sources said approval of his nomination was assured.

The Judiciary Committee was on the brink of clearing the nomination yesterday for action by the full Senate but Daniel Ellsberg, who was acquitted in the Pentagon Papers case, telephoned several senators to charge that Richardson had not disclosed all he knew about a burglary of Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office in 1971.

THE COMMITTEE adjourned its closed session, postponed the vote and publicly questioned Richardson about whether he had urged former White House aide Egil Krogh Jr., last month not to reveal that the CIA had supplied fake documents and disguises for use in the burglary.

Richardson, visibly annoyed for the first time in the hearings, at one point protested the line of questioning. "The only thing that has any bearing in this hearing is whether I was alerted to or participated in a cover-up," he told the senators. "The answer is that I had not. On the contrary, I was trying to see that everything was brought out . . . I have been very patient, very detailed, I cannot add to what I've already said."

"What troubles me and my colleagues," Majority Whip Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia told Richardson, "is the possibility that you have not responded with complete candor (about your meeting with Krogh) . . . I felt that we had to draw this information (from you) through tedious questions. I felt that something short of full answers was forthcoming."

Richardson's nomination is expected to be approved, sources said, principally because of his appointment of Harvard law professor Archibald Cox, a Democrat, to be special Watergate prosecutor, and his agreement to give the prosecutor maximum independence over the investigation.

There is a feeling among the senators, the sources said that Richardson is the best nominee for attorney general that President Nixon would name and that further delay would also hold up the work of the prosecutor. The committee also was expected to pass a resolution endorsing the selection of Cox.

Questioning of Richardson yesterday focused on a May 1 meeting he had with Krogh and what Krogh told him about CIA involvement in the burglary of the psychiatrist's office.

Richardson, reading from his notes about the conversation, acknowledged that Krogh told him that CIA documents and disguises were used in the burglary. Richardson's notes include the reference: Gen. Robert E. Cushman Jr., former deputy director of the CIA "has told presentence investigators that he authorized this . . . through E. Howard Hunt," a former White House consultant who pleaded guilty in the Watergate case and is one of those responsible for breaking into the psychiatrist's office.

KROGH. Richardson said, was seeking advice from him about whether to disclose his role in the break-in to the judge presiding at the Pentagon Papers trial. Krogh has admitted supervising the break-in as part of the work of the plumbers, a White House group formed in mid-1971 to secretly investigate leaks of national security material to the news media.

Krogh, according to Richardson, was concerned about whether disclosures to the judge would violate national security restrictions that governed the work of the plumbers.

Richardson said he told Krogh to disclose what he knew, but Krogh's subsequent affidavit to the judge did not mention the CIA documents and disguises. The burglary was a factor in the dismissal of the charges against Ellsberg.

Richardson Okayed As Attorney General

2 By JEFFREY ANTEVIL

Washington, May 23 (NEWS Bureau)—The Senate confirmed Elliot L. Richardson as attorney general today by a vote of 82 to 3, clearing the way for Richardson to name former U.S. Solicitor General Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor.

A number of senators, including Assistant Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd (W. Va.), said they still had doubts about "inconsistencies" in Richardson's lengthy testimony before the Judiciary Committee.

But they indicated they were voting for President Nixon's nominee in order to get Cox on the job and go forward with the Watergate prosecution.

Cox drew praise from Byrd and other senators despite the disclosure that his brother, Maxwell Cox, is an attorney for billionaire recluse Howard Hughes, a major Nixon campaign contributor.

He Sees No Conflict

The former solicitor general told the Associated Press that he didn't see any conflict of interest in "the mere fact that Hughes' name came up" at Senate Watergate hearings. "If there is something more to it," he added, "then I suppose I would an effort to coverup the Central Intelligence Agency's involvement in the 1971 break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Ellsberg, who was a defendant in the Pentagon Papers trial, made the charge in a series of last-minute phone calls to Byrd and other committee members. Richardson strongly denied it, telling the panel he had supported full disclosure of the facts about the break-in by White House employees.

After reviewing the testimony, all 16 members of the committee voted to confirm Richardson. The senate voted about an hour later under the pressure of a Memorial Day recess which starts tomorrow.

Scott Raps Ellsberg

The liberal Democrats, Joseph Biden (Del.), Harold E. Hughes (Iowa), and Mike Gravel (Alaska), cast the votes against Richardson.

Shortly before the vote, Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott (Pa.) charged that it was "indecent and contemptible" for the committee, on which he serves, to listen to allegations from "a self-confessed thief."

Scott made it clear he was referring to Ellsberg, whose trial in Los Angeles for stealing the Pentagon Papers so he could expose them to the public ended this month with the dismissal of all charges by Judge Matt Byrne Jr. Byrne said he acted in large part because of the break-in and other illegal activities by White House aides.

Byrd said he still had doubts about Richardson, and felt that the appointment of a new attorney general from within the administration created "the appearance that this administration is investigating itself." But he told reporters he was voting for confirmation "reluctantly" to insure the appointment of Cox under guidelines, worked out by Richardson and the Judiciary Committee, which give the special prosecutor full authority over the Watergate investigation.

Byrd said the Senate "would have to start all over again, with no assurance of any better luck" if Richardson were rejected. "At least the President has selected a prosecutor who is of high reputation," Byrd said.

Senate Confirms Richardson, 82-3, as Attorney General

BY DON IRWIN

Times Staff Writer

WASHINGTON—The Senate voted 82 to 3 Wednesday to confirm the nomination of Elliot L. Richardson as attorney general, clearing the way for his appointment of a special prosecutor in the Watergate case.

Richardson has promised that his first act after his swearing-in, tentatively set for Friday, will be to name former Solicitor General Archibald Cox to the job and to give him full independence and authority to probe the multiple offenses attributed to President Nixon's 1972 campaign operation.

The Senate voted to confirm Richardson only 90 minutes after its Judiciary Committee had cleared him without dissent. On Tuesday, the committee ended six days of intensive hearings in which Watergate, rather than Richardson's generally recognized abilities, was the key issue.

Many senators who voted for Richardson—who has served President Nixon successively as undersecretary of state, secretary of health, education and welfare and defense secretary — voiced reservations about confirming him in the Watergate climate.

Their views were represented in a speech by the majority whip, Sen. Robert C. Byrd (D-W.Va.), during the 40-minute debate that preceded the vote. Byrd said that the Senate Memorial Day recess could begin Wednesday if it disposed of the Richardson nomination appeared to speed the proceedings.

Byrd said he supported the nomination "sonewhat reluctantly," even though he was a "Richardson" supporter. He said he had no other

Richardson, Byrd said, "has been shuffled from pillar to post with every new crisis," and his selection as attorney general in the aftermath of the Watergate affair "gives the appearance of the Administration investigating itself."

Byrd indicated readiness to take Richardson at his word that he will neither interfere with Cox's investigation nor countenance any corrupt of Administration wrongdoing, primarily because he said he sees little hope that a better choice would be forthcoming from President

Nixon if the nomination were defeated.

Byrd's willingness to give Richardson the benefit of any doubts, primarily because of his reputation and his choice of a prosecutor, failed to convince the three Democrats who voted against confirmation—Sens. Harold E. Hughes (Iowa), Mike Gravel (Alaska) and Joseph R. Biden Jr. (Del.).

Gravel said through a spokesman that he lacked confidence in "people who have been around the President to do what needs to be done in this situation" and was voting "more against the Administration than against Mr. Richardson."

Biden said through an aide that he feared that Richardson's "extremely close ties to the Nixon Administration" were unfortunate.

ly have tainted the possibility of establishing his impartiality," even though "his personal qualifications are above reproach."

Hughes left the Capitol immediately after the roll call without comment.

The Judiciary Committee had gone out of its way to set standards for Richardson during its six days of hearings.

It became clear early in the hearings that Richardson's chances for confirmation would be greatly enhanced if he named a special prosecutor acceptable to the committee. Cox was easily acceptable.

Before the hearings ended, Richardson had agreed to give the prosecutor full independence, reserving to himself only the right to dismiss his appointee in the case of misconduct. Their roles were formally blended in a set of guidelines negotiated line-by-line among Richardson, Cox and the committee.

The principal business before the committee's vote to clear Richardson was reported to be a decision to let the record stand without further hearings. That record was reopened without notice Tuesday to explore questions that had been raised by Daniel Ellsberg, a defendant in the Pentagon Papers trial. That trial was dismissed May 11 in Los Angeles after disclosure of Central Intelligence Agency support for a raid conceived by White House aides of the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

The question relayed through committee members by Ellsberg suggested that Richardson might have gone along with an attempted coverup of the CIA role, an inference that Richardson vigorously denied.

Elliot Is Sworn to New Post

By JEFFREY ANTEVIL

Washington, May 25 (NEWS Bureau)—Elliott L. Richardson, taking the oath of office as attorney general in an elaborate White House ceremony, said today that the structure of government is "under stress," but that it "is strong . . . and it will endure."

Richardson, 52, referred to the Watergate scandal only indirectly after he was sworn in by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, with present and former cabinet members and their families looking on. President Nixon, who introduced him with high praise for his past service as a lawyer and government official, made no reference to Watergate.

Less than three hours after he promised the President and others in the East Room that he would be both fair and fearless in administering the Justice Department, Richardson formally appointed Archibald Cox as special prosecutor with full authority to investigate and prosecute the Watergate case.

Cox, a Democrat who served as U.S. solicitor general during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, was sworn in at the Justice department.

"The first concern of the Department of Justice must be the individual," Richardson said as outgoing Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst and other administration officials looked on. "The second concern is truth," he added. "The first of these demands fairness, the second demands fearlessness. I will endeavor to be faithful to both."

"This is a time when the institutions of our government are under stress," Richardson said. "But this is not because the structure is not sound," he said. "If there are flaws they are in ourselves."

The solution to current problems, he added, is not restructuring the government but "renewal and reaffirmation."

A Security Council Member

The President said Richardson, who has served as undersecretary of state, secretary of health, education and welfare, and secretary of defense since Nixon took office, will be a member of the National Security Council in recognition of these "unusual qualifications" for an attorney general.

Cox is expected to begin his new duties immediately, assisted at least for the time being by the three assistant U.S. attorneys who have handled the government's case since the break-in at Democratic headquarters last June 12.

But informed sources said the three—Earl J. Silbert, Seymour Glazer and Donald E. Campbell —have not decided whether to stay once Cox is established in his new post, nor is it certain that the former solicitor general will want to keep them on the job. Because he has very little experience with criminal trials, Cox will name a chief deputy with extensive background in this area.

Attention: Legal Counsel

Attached is a copy of the complaint filed in this action. Plaintiff in this action alleges that local and state law enforcement officers have disseminated written information alleging that plaintiff has made a bomb threat. Maintaining that this information is false, plaintiff seeks an order to all the defendants to expunge from the plaintiff's records any statement concerning the alleged threat. Plaintiff also seeks $50,000 in punitive damages from each defendant and injunctive relief.

We request that you ascertain whether or not the Federal Bureau of Investigation has such information concerning the plaintiff. Because plaintiff's cause of action seems to lie primarily against state law enforcement officers (the Mesa, Arizona Police Department), this action could be dismissed against the Attorney General if your records indicate that the F.B.I. is not maintaining the alleged false records concerning the plaintiff.
